The next meeting will be in keeping with Music week, with Mrs. W. N. Pindler as chairman. Mrs. E. E. Olds is chairman for the Stayton district. The club members are looking forward to the last meeting of the season, which has been designated by the president, Mrs. B. L. Schaefer, as a "style show." Each club member must wear a print or cotton dress, or they will be subject to a fine. They are all requested to make dresses and for the dress made by a club member which is considered the best made by the judges, the president has offered to make any kind of a dress as a prize.

The home economics class will be asked to cooperate, and to the high school girl making the best dress. The store will give enough print for a dress as a prize.

The program for the last meeting was put on by a group of high school pupils. There were plays, songs and skits all heartily received. Mrs. Gweneth Melke favored with a solo.

The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. G. Foster, Mrs. W. D. Roberts and Mrs. C. Booker.

The president reported that on Tuesday of the past week several of the club women helped clean the clubhouse.

At the suggestion of Mrs. G. F. Korinek, a collection was taken up so that members who were unable to help with the house cleaning might help financially. The collection netted $2.70 which will be used for wax and other material needed.

STAYTON, April 24.—The annual Junior Jinks was given at the school auditorium Friday night before a crowded and enthusiastic house. Most of the acts were along the Oriental idea, and consisted of singing, dancing and stunts.

It had been announced some weeks ago that a vote would be taken prior to the "jinks" and the winner of the most popular girl contest would be announced on the program. ## LEVIATHAN'S FINALE RECALLS COLORFUL PAST

S. S. LEVIATHAN in PEACE TIME GLORY.

COMMODORE ALBERT RANDALL

AS A WAR TRANSPORT.

Memories of her adventurous past are recalled by the news that the S. S. Leviathan, mighty flagship of the United States Line, is shortly to be taken out of service and handed back to the U. S. Shipping Board. Few ships afloat have had a more colorful career than the Leviathan. Built in 1914 and christened the "Vaterland," she was the pride of the German merchant service when Europe was plunged into war. At the time of the outbreak, the Vaterland was berthed at Hoboken, N. J., where, in accordance with international law she was interned. When the United States joined the "Big Parade," the Vaterland, remodeled and renamed "Leviathan," was put into service by the U. S. Government as a troop transport. In this capacity she made a glorious record. Flying with the regularity of a ferryboat between New York and Europe, she carried hundreds of thousands of our boys "Over There," accommodating between 10,000 and 15,000 every trip. Fate seemed to watch over her on this perilous business, for although every U-boat in the German service was out to "get" her, she came through without mishap. After the war, the Leviathan, once more remodeled, at a cost of $10,000,000, went back into the passenger service under the flag of the U. S. Line, then operated by the Shipping Board. Later the line was purchased by a private corporation, and the big ship since has plied her trade as one of the most luxurious liners afloat. When she goes into oblivion, her commander, Commodore Albert B. Randall, will take command of her younger sister, the S. S. Washington, an American-built ship, a more luxurious ship, but lacking the romantic associations of ex-Queen Leviathan.

1885, living in Portland until 1904, when she came here. She leaves five brothers and a sister: Fred, John and Henry Stute, West Woodburn; S. E. Stute of Phoenix, Ariz.; Dr. William Stute of Tacoma and Mrs. C. V. Wilkens of Portland.
