PREVENTING ILLNESS CONSTANT PROBLEM

Regular Visits to Doctor to See Child is Sturdy Are Advised

The large majority of bables are well when they are born. The universal problem is how to keep them well. Preventing illness in bables is frequently much easier than curing it. Many diseases of babyhood are much less common today than they used to be because modern science has found out how they can be prevented. Some diseases can be prevented by feeding the baby properly and giving him plenty of direct unlight and some by vaccinating or inoculating him with a protec-tive substance. Some diseases can be avoided only by keeping the baby from contact with them and by keeping flies and other insects away from him, for these carry disease; and sterilizing (by boiling) all artificial food and everything that he is likely to put into his mouth.

Regularity in the care of the baby and the establishment of routine health habits are necessary if he is to be kept well. The daily round of bathing, dressing, feeding, sleep, outdoor life (including sun baths), play, exercise, and elimination must be always regular.

To keep a baby well there should be continued supervision by a doctor trained in the care of bables. The mother can not know nor recognize many of the early signs of trouble because she is not trained to do this and because she is too near the baby and sees him too often to realize that any change is taking place. The doctor, who sees the baby once or twice a month, looks at him with a trained eye and can see whether he is as rosy as usual or is becoming a little pale, whether he is as active as he should be, or whether he shows other early signs that are the forerunners of trouble.

A mother can not know just when her particular baby needs to have his food changed or increased, nor when is the best time for her baby to be protected from diphtheria and vaccinated against smallpox. Such things as these the doctor will know, and his ad-

FOR BABY'S TEETH

First Teeth Come Out in Half Year: Permanent Set in at 6-Year Stage

The development of the teeth begins at least six months before birth. It is probable that the proper foods in the diet of the prospective mother help to lay the foundation for healthy teeth in the baby and that lack of proper food will deprive both her own and the baby's teeth of some part of their normal vigor. After the baby is born, in order that the teeth may continue to develop normally, it is of utmost importance that he himself receive the best diet possible, namely, his mother's milk. During the period of breast feeding it is also important that the mother should eat the proper foods and get plen-ty of direct sunlight.

The child's first set of teeth are called the deciduous, or "milk" teeth. Most of them come through the gums during the first two years and are replaced, beginning at about the sixth year, with the second or permanent teeth.

Cut Teeth at Six Months At birth every tiny tooth of both sets has already begun to form; nearly all the first set are already partly or wholly harden-ed. As the baby grows, the teeth grow also; and if the baby is healthy they are ready to cut through the gums, beginning at about the sixth or seventh month

Teething is a normal process which continues from about the age of six months to 21/2 years. During the time when a tooth is actually coming through the gum the baby may be irritable or fretful and may not eat well, but teething alone rarely accounts for illness or fever. If, during the period from six to 18 months when the first 12 teeth are coming through, the baby is feverish or sick, a doctor should be consulted, and the filness should not be attributed to "teething" until all other possible causes such as
