PIONEER KINSMEN PAY LAST TRIBUTE

To Mrs. Olive May Riches; Many From out of Town at Funeral

SILVERTOWN, May 8—Almost every pioneer family of the Silvertown community was represented in the final tribute paid to Olive May Riches, wife of Charles R. Riches, who was laid to rest Friday afternoon at Mount Hope service in the Waldo Hills following services at the Ekman Funeral home at Silvertown.

The Rev. H. C. Stover, pastor of the congregational church at Salem, and an old friend of the family gave the funeral eulogy and officiated at the brief grave-yard service. Members of the local chapter of the Rebekah lodge also participated in the services and accompanied the funeral cortege to the cemetery.

Donald Allison of Salem presided at the organ and Rev. Mr. Stover and Maynard McKinley also of Salem, sang "Rock of Ages" preceding the ceremony and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" following it.

Acting as pallbearers were John Goodknecht, Frank Bowers, Jake Doerfler, Elmer King, Floyd Allen and Lew Davenport, all old neighbors of the Riches family.

Coming from out of town to attend the funeral were Henry LaBare of St. Helens, Frank LaBare and Archa LaBare of Wren, brothers of Mrs. Riches, and Mrs. Maude Haberly, Miss Mildred Haberly, Miss Loraine Fletcher from The Dalles, Elam Amstutz of Portland, old time neighbors and friends besides many relatives and friends from Salem, Turner and other surrounding communities.

Mrs. Riches died at the family home Wednesday afternoon following almost a year of illness.

SILVERTOWN, May 8—Samuel L. Bates, 80, died today at the home of his niece, Mrs. Cora B. Wilcox in the Bridge Creek district. Funeral arrangements in charge of Ekman Funeral Home will be announced later. He is survived by two sons, Tom Bates of Bronx, New York, and Mortimore Bates of Brooklyn, New York, and one sister, Mrs. Charlotte L. Kem of the Bridge Creek district.

Bits for Breakfast

arrangement was made as to how many "complimentary" votes he was to receive. The consequence was he was nominated and elected and served his term. He made an excellent congressman and was a brilliant man. Crossman also mentioned Dave Logan as an attorney in the case. He appeared at the preliminary hearing before "Deacon" Hatch, who was a justice of the peace. The gun that did the killing was in evidence. Some one handling the gun pointed it at Logan accidentally. Logan yelled at him, "Don't point that gun at me, point it at the court!" "C. S. Woodworth was in Salem at the time, but he was too soft hearted to witness the hanging and went out into the woods until it was over. But his description of the affair, as told to his descendants many times, verifies what Al told in many particulars."

Al Crossman, now an officer in the U. S. court at Portland, was long prominent in Salem. He was postmaster. So was Richard Dearborn, member of the firm for which he worked at the time of the hanging; and another member, Lucien Heath, was Salem's first mayor, also secretary of state. J. D. McCully, mentioned by Mr. Woodworth, is now with the Patton book store in Salem. He kept a copy of the booklet containing the confessions of Beale and Baker, published by Fred Schwatka, then a printer in the Statesman office, afterward famous Arctic explorer. Mr. McCully promises to loan the booklet to the Bits man as soon as he finds it; having misplaced it. Has any reader a copy? If so, it should be filed—made a historic record. The father of the writer attended the hanging, from his home in Polk county, in Cooper Hollow, half way between Dallas and Mouth.
