

BEARCATS WIN WILD CONTEST

Erickson and Oravec Swat Homers; Score 12 to 9; Hurlers all Sore

Sore-armed pitchers on both sides proved highly liberal in the Willamette-Linfield baseball game which wound up the Northwest conference season here Friday, and the result was a stunning duel in which the Bearcats came out ahead 12 to 9, by virtue of harder smacking rather than better fielding.

Each of four men who labored on the mound was temporarily bereft of everything excepting a glove, but Burch, who succeeded Tweed for Willamette before the first inning was over, was the least generous of the four, and while his support wobbled at times, it scintillated at others. The queerest inning was the seventh, in which the Bearcats made three bad bobbles and two brilliant plays, net result being one run. In the fourth the Wildcats scored two runs on an hit, two errors and a couple of boners. Most of Bearcats' brilliant at Bat

What the Bearcats lacked occasionally in fielding, they more than made up at bat. Erickson hit for the circuit once but it was called a single and an error, so he went back and did the thing right for a homer in the fifth, after Oravec had homered in the fourth. Oravec hit four times, Erickson and Gribble three, one of Gribble's being a triple in the first inning with the bases loaded. He came in later on Moyer's bat which went for a hit, so that triple evened up the four runs Linfield had scored due to Tweed's wildness in the first.

Everybody who played the entire game for Willamette, got one or more hits. Fielding honors went largely to Pemberton, who made a couple of circus catches and turned one into a double play. He and Manning got two hits each, and Manning stole four bases.

Vall, McGowan and Bride hit two apiece for Linfield. Michener was relieved on the mound by Helsner in the fourth, but it wasn't any improvement.

The score:

When Legs Go Wobbly

By BURNLEY

© 1931 King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved

WHEN a baseball player's legs begin to trouble him it is a sure sign that the end of his playing career is not very far off, unless the trouble is of a kind that can be mended. Strong underpinning is especially necessary in the case of infielders, who have to lunge after scuzzing grounders and screaming liners every afternoon throughout the hot summer months. The last thing a veteran ball-player loses is his batting eye. Men like Hornsby, Ruth and Travis Jackson can still hit as well as ever, but their legs are no longer as strong and speedy as of yore, which makes them a liability rather than an asset on the defense.

In the case of Hornsby and Jackson this weakness in the field becomes especially glaring, because they are infielders, who have to be constantly running and bending, twisting and turning, in their efforts to stop base hits. On the other hand, Ruth, playing in the outfield, has more of a chance to rest his aging legs.

In cases like these, when a veteran ball player can still hit very well but has slowed up so greatly in the field that he lets many hits get past him, it becomes a problem for the manager to decide whether the player's batting ability offsets the defensive weakness caused by his unreliable underpinning.

Infielders with ailing legs like Hornsby and Jackson are benched in spite of their great hitting ability, while brilliant defensive shortstops, such as Durocher and Blonny Ryan, can hold down regular jobs, although they can't hit the size of their collars.

Durocher, recently acquired by the Cardinals, always finishes the season with one of the puniest batting marks in the league, but his marvelous work in the field makes him one of the most highly regarded of National League infielders. Walter Hoyt, I think it was, once tabbed the gabby Leo as "the all-American one" but nevertheless Mister Durocher gets along very well, thank you. Fielding certainly seems to be the word over hitting in his case, at least.

PARRISH NOSES OUT 4 TO 3 WIN

Serdotz Allows Only Three Hits, Drives in run That Wins in 9th

Parrish junior high took a tighter grip on the secondary school baseball championship Friday afternoon by nosing out Leslie junior high 4 to 3. Nick Serdotz, Parrish pitcher, allowed only three hits but he walked in a couple of runs in the fourth inning, so it was left for him to win his own game in the first half of the ninth with a single which brought Oglesby home.

Parrish got seven hits off Browning, but they were spread out one to an inning until the eighth, when two of them produced two runs to tie the score. One of these was a three-bagger by Maerz — a legitimate single on which the ball became lost in the grass. Parrish had scored one on Damon's triple in the third after Leslie had tallied in the first. Serdotz struck out 16 batters, Browning nine.

The teams will play again Monday afternoon, the final game of the secondary schools' series.

There will be no wrestling show here next Tuesday night, as it is Memorial day, an occasion on which such programs are forbidden by state law, even if the patriotic matchmaker and commission were not opposed to it anyway. So the show will go over to Thursday night. We hear the German heavyweight champion, Stahl, will be here on that occasion.

"Elmer the Great" which comes with Joe E. Brown to the Elsinore Sunday, is a typical baseball story which involves one of those baseball freaks who hold the title in the national pastime for their peculiarities as well as for their ability. Joe knows a lot of those fellows, and can tell stories about them. One of his best involves Walter, the Great Malls, know to Salem fans as played with Portland for several seasons. It seems Malls had pitched the first game of a double header in Oakland one day, in which Pat O'Shea, umpiring behind the plate, hadn't called any of them right, according to the boys. Just before the second game, Malls stepped up and with flowery speech, presented O'Shea with a tin cup.

"What's the idea of this cup?" O'Shea demanded.

"We'll have the pencils later," Malls explained.

Two previous temporary orders issued by C. M. Thomas, state utility commissioner, involving the rates and practices of the Northwestern Electric company, were cancelled Friday it was announced at the state utilities department.

Both of the temporary orders were attacked in the federal courts and Thomas was enjoined from attempting their enforcement.

Thomas declared that he had decided to cancel the temporary orders because of economic conditions which have changed considerably since they were first entered. He declared that the evidence adduced on final hearing may establish that the valuation upon which the orders were based is too high due to a decline in reproduction costs. Thomas said other evidence might establish that the eight per cent return, fixed on the common stock equity, also was too high.

7 WOMEN HONORED ALPHA KAPPA NU

For the first time in three years, no men were elected to Alpha Kappa Nu at this year at Willamette university, the seven honored students all being young women. The society is an honorary one, only seniors being eligible for membership and scholarship being the criterion for election.

Chapel services held at the university Friday morning were in honor of the new members: Harriett Adams, Helen Hamilton, Hazel Snyder and Anabel Toose, Salem; Dorothy Rose and Louisa Sidwell, Portland; Margaret Notson, Heppner.

Dr. E. B. Stevens, registrar at the University of Washington, delivered an address to the new society members, stressing three modern trends in education. He has spent two days on the campus investigating the university's qualifications for a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor fraternity.
