FAVORABLE REPORT ON RIVER PROBABLE

Canalization Would be Part Of Public Works Plan, Said at Chamber

Strong probability of a favorable report on the rehearing on canalization of the Willamette river between Oregon City and Salem has been predicted in news dispatches from Washington, President B. E. Sisson of the chamber of commerce stated at the chamber session yesterday noon.

The chamber here was instrumental in gaining a rehearing on the canalization project, and a chamber member, Atttorney William P. Ellis, presented the argument before the army engineers in Washington recently. Ellis is now en route home, via New Orleans.

If the engineers do favor the project, it will then be included in the public works program. It is estimated the canalization, including a dam at Lincoln and new locks at Oregon City, will cost six million dollars.

No word will reach here on outcome of the board of army engineers report until same is carried in news dispatches from the national capital, it is said.

Valley towns cooperating with the Salem chamber for rehearing on the river canalization were Independence, McMinnville, Newberg and Corvallis.

GASOLINE REFUND POLICY PROPOSED

Payment of gasoline refunds to farmers out of fuels tax receipts before such money is credited to the general fund, was proposed by Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state, in a letter sent to Rufus C. Holman, state treasurer, Monday.

"In view of the hardship that is worked on the farmer because of his inability to deposit or cash his state warrant for gasoline tax refunds, I am desirous of doing everything in my power to be helpful to him," Hoss' letter read.

"Since this tax money is deposited with you, I do not see why such payments should not be considered as funds to be held in trust for the purpose of payment of refunds before the items are placed to the credit of the general fund. I would appreciate information as to whether it would be possible to obtain your cooperation in alleviating the condition."

Daniel Adams, 91, Leader Of Salem G. A. R. Recalls Experiences of Civil War

Daniel S. Adams, commander of the Salem G. A. R. post, Civil war veterans, was 91 years old March 11, 1933, and is one of the youngest men in Oregon for his age, if his friends are correct in their statements. His home is at 255 Washington street, and he is keenly alert in mind and interested in all that goes on in his town, state and nation.

It was in Kewanee, Ill., that he enlisted in Company A., 124th Illinois Volunteers in August, 1862, and left with his regiment for Camp Butler, near Springfield, Ill. As soon as organization was perfected, this regiment was sent to Jackson, Tenn., where later it was put into the Third division, 17th army corps.

Mr. Adams tells of his experiences from this point onward until his discharge and return home, more than three years later. He says: "Our first trip was down on the Tallahatchee river, Miss., where we put the enemy to rout. When we left there we marched to Memphis, Tenn., the whole army, and took boats to Millican's Bend. . . While at that point, the blocade of Vicksburg was run. Then we marched from Millican's Bend to Gruinsberg, and these boats were used to take the army across the Mississippi. I mean the boats that had run the blocade. We crossed the river April 30, 1863.

Food Scarce

"May 1 we had a fight at Port Gibson, Miss.; May 12th another at Raymond, Miss.; May 16, one at Jackson, Miss., a bad one; then we went on a campaign down in Mississippi below Oxford, on Yockeney creek. We had nothing to eat for 13 days except two ears of corn per day for each man. That was one place where I was frozen to death, starved to death and scared to death all at the same time!

"It was here that we heard the famous proclamation: "Lay down your arms in 90 days and you may keep your slaves" . . . Our supplies were supposed to come to Hollow Springs but the commander of the supply train sold out to the rebels, this being the cause of our shortage of rations, as mentioned before. On this campaign we were very weary and I slept in the rain one night and woke to find my coat frozen fast in thin ice, as it had turned bitterly cold in the night; but I was too dead for rest to know or care.

"At Champion hills the fight lasted from daylight to dark, in an open field. There is where our regiment did deadly work. We were put behind a four-gun battery on a knoll, in the middle of the afternoon. We were ordered to charge the enemy, and our regiment was in the front, and wiped out the 43rd Georgia. They fell back and we took 600 prisoners that day, along Baker's creek.

124th Men's Flag

"In a prize drill held at that place, our regiment—the 124th—Illinois—took the flag. It was the biggest day of my life! The higher officers, including Col. Howe, told General John A. Logan that he had seen the 124th make just as fine a charge at Champion hills as it did in the drill that won for the regiment not only the prize flag, but the title thereafter of "The Bully Hundred—and Two Dozen" . . . That was in 1863.

"Our next battle was at Big Black River, Miss., a few days later, as we were enroute to Vicksburg. This battle lasted about a half day. Our next fight was at Vicksburg and we were there 47 days and nights. Jackson is 40 miles from Vicksburg. Vicksburg surrendered on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Sunday we went in. We crossed the state of Mississippi February 3, 1863, and got back March 8, tearing up a railroad and fighting as we went along. The boys would tear up rails and twist them around trees, then set fire to the ties. All this time we were engaged in skirmish fighting, not big fights. I never had my clothes off during that whole month's marching, and slept on the ground every night.

Then we made another raid up the Yazoo river to Yazoo City, a flat, swampy place, where Sherman tried to take Vicksburg but was repulsed. We had a little skirmish fighting at Yazoo City. The next was at Spanish Fort, seven miles from Mobile, Ala. We were there 13 days, from the last of March until the first part of April, 1865. We marched from there to Montgomery, Ala., and on that march we heard of Lincoln's assassination, and that Lee had surrendered. We then had several days' marching at the rate of about 25 miles a day. We were under the enemies' fire, all told, 82 days and 60 nights.

Homeward Trip Delayed

"We were in Montgomery from April to July. The war was over and there was nothing to do but wait for the boats to come after us. Every week we would hear reports that the boats were coming, but they would fail to appear. The boys got mighty restless, having nothing to do, and one day someone got hold of some blackberry cordial and we all got drunk! Finally the boats did come, and we came up the river from Montgomery, headed for Chicago. From Cairo, Ill., to Chicago, I rode on top of a box car, the train was so crowded. At the depots women and men would bring us baskets of food, to show their appreciation of us, and everybody was happy. I was mustered out at Chicago August 15, 1865.

"I forgot to say that they took the 72nd Illinois on the march with Sherman to the sea, leaving the 124th in Vicksburg, after the surrender, to do provost duty and rest, because the 124th had been going so long and fighting so hard. The 72nd was the Chicago Board of Trade regiment, and had done nothing but provost duty until that march to the sea."

D. S. Adams, or "Dad," as he is familiarly known to his friends, enjoys relating his war-time adventures to those who drop in to chat with him and Mrs. Adams in their pleasant home on Washington street. His first wife, to whom he was married shortly after his discharge from the army in 1865, was Martha Britann Welch. She passed away 25 years ago, in Corvallis.

Mr. Adams is the father of Grace E. Hall, well-known Oregon author, who resides in Portland.

Memorial Day

By ISABEL GRAY CLIFFORD

A day is this for reverent thought—
When poignant memory
Recalls the legions once acclaimed,
The heroes known, and those unnamed,
Who died for Liberty.

A day is this when man meets man
With understanding heart
Across the tribute of the flowers
That he has brought to make these hours
A fragrant day, apart.

A day is this of flags unfurled
To catch the winds of May—
And banners that our soldiers bore
And loved and prayed and battled for—
The flags of yesterday.

A day is this of martial airs
And requiems for the dead—
Quick music for the laggard feet,
And campfire songs, with memories sweet,
And words old comrades said.
A day is this so near our hearts
It seems a sentient thing—
We vow anew that wars shall cease,
We breathe new prayers for lasting peace,
With this rebirth of Spring.

Parent-Teacher Meeting to be Held on Friday

Semi-annual convention of the county Parent-Teacher association will be held at the chamber of commerce here Friday night, June 2, when all organizations of the county, whether affiliated or not, are invited.

The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock, and in addition to business matters and a program will include election of officers.

The county president is Mrs. A. E. Bradley of Aumsville.

School Districts Get $50,000 of Elementary Fund

Checks totaling $50,100 were sent to the various school districts in the county this week by the county school superintendent's office. The funds represented the first half of the 1933 allotment of the two-mill elementary school fund raised by state taxation. Coming to the school districts when their treasuries are low, the new moneys will permit the taking up of a number of outstanding warrants.

Salem's share in the distribution is $17,100, and the funds are distributed on the basis of $303.43 for 1933 to each teacher, this disbursement being $150 a teacher.

10 Army Planes To be Seen at Albany Airport

The Salem airport has been asked to extend an invitation to Salem townspeople to go to Albany today to see 10 army airplanes which will arrive at the airport in the Linn county city at 2 p. m. The planes form a contingent going north from San Francisco to Vancouver, Wash. While the planes will stop at Medford, Albany and Portland, they are not scheduled for appearance at Salem, according to the latest unconfirmed reports here yesterday. The airplanes will be in Albany about two hours today. The aeronautics committee of the American legion post there will have charge of Albany's reception to the army fliers.

MATTHEWS TO GET HONORARY DEGREE

Now Completing 40 Years of Teaching at Willamette; Addressing Seniors

The honorary degree of doctor of laws will be conferred upon Professor James T. Matthews by Willamette university at its 89th annual commencement here Monday, June 19. Professor Matthews, who will deliver the commencement address, this year completes 40 years of continuous service at the university and is the oldest member of the faculty in point of service. His entire teaching career has been spent with Willamette.

In 1883, Matthews enrolled as a sub - freshman at the local school, taking the bachelor of arts degree in 1889. He received his master of arts degree from Willamette university in 1894, and since that time has done considerable advanced work in other universities.

His teaching ability and warm contacts with university students have given him an outstanding place at the school here.

Mrs. Matthews is also a member of the class of 1889. Their two sons are Willamette graduates: Oliver in the class of 1913, and Donald in the class of 1918.
