FLOOD LEAVES BUT QUESTION PREVAILS

LABISH CENTER, June 12.—Just what damage may follow in the path of the unprecedented flooding of about 200 acres of onions on the Hayes farms late last week after melting snows and heavy rains caused the big Pudding river to back up and get out of its boundaries, is not known. The flood reached its peak Saturday noon, had receded five inches by that night, and by Monday morning had almost entirely disappeared. In places the onions were covered by three feet of water.

It is thought, however, that since the onions were not submerged for a long period that damage will be confined to a few acres where washing of the soil occurred. The hot weather of Sunday and Monday may also prove damaging.
