As though from a select box overlooking the "great arena" which makes up life, Otto K. Paulus sketched the action of the drama to members of the Salem Rotary club yesterday noon. He reviewed the new knowledge in the fields of science, medicine and sociology. Old conceptions have been disproven, he said, in many fields; and new thought accepts ideas that are revolutionary. In science matter is no longer regarded as imfutable. Light is regarded as a form of matter, and its rays are bent by forces of gravitation. In medicine the ancient ideas have long since been adandoned in the face of the discoveries of Pasteur and Koch and other scientific investigators. Paresis, leprosy and anemia now have cures or methods of treatment. Paulus touched on ecology, which deals with the distribution of life, the ebb and flow of animal and human populations. Looking over the past he noted the crumbling of ancient civilizations and com-Of Auto Crash mented that history suggested conjectures as to the permanence of our own civilization.
