between 1824 and 1828, and he succeeded Pierre C. Pambrun in charge of old Fort Walla Walla of that company after the death of the latter.

And Mrs. McKinlay was manifestly Indian, or part Indian, and she must have understood the Walla Walla Indian language. No all white women were wives of any Hudson's Bay company's officers in the Oregon country when she and her husband took charge at Fort Walla Walla.

At a later time, soon, the history of Peopemoxmox and of his troubles and death will be resumed in another series in this column, when the writer expects to give something more about the antecedents of Mrs. McKinlay.

The Bits man spent some of his boyhood days within 20 miles of where a good deal of this history was made, and the names of the leading characters, including those of the Indian chiefs, from Peopemoxmox to Howlish Wampool and Winapmoot, etc., etc., sound familiar.

Strawberry Pick Well Under Head In Liberty Area

LIBERTY, June 21 — Strawberry picking is well under way here this week. Patches are generally poor, a great many plants having been frozen out. Many of the smaller home plots were entirely ruined and plowed up.

What is said to be the best patch here is that on the Bayles place, known as the old Lemmy farm. It consists of about six acres of Marshalls and an acre of Corvallis. Of the 15 acres on the Busick-Compton place, the 10 acres on the highway are very spotted as to plants. This farm is again in possession of J. J. McDonald, with Mr. Neuens renting from him this year.

Cherries, though dropping heavily, are to be a generally good crop. Italian prunes are quite generally conceded to be poor. Date prunes will bear much better here this fall. They are not, however, raised to a great extent here. There are few loganberry patches here of any size, but a few good ones in Prospect area.
