

STATE LAW AFFECTS U. S. BRANCH BANKS

Van Winkle Rules Approval Of Banking Director Of State Required

National banking associations must obtain the approval of the state superintendent of banks for the establishment of branch banks in the state of Oregon, Attorney General Van Winkle held in an opinion handed down Thursday.

"Restrictions imposed by state law upon the location of state banks, applies equally to the location of branch national banks," the opinion reads.

"Before any branch is established the board of directors of any bank or trust company desiring to establish such branch shall make application therefor to the superintendent of banks. Such application shall be filed and published and shall be investigated and approved or disapproved by the superintendent of banks, and shall be subject to appeal to the state banking board, all in the same manner as is provided in the case of the organization of a bank or trust company.

"No bank or trust company shall establish or operate any branch or branches without first receiving the written approval of the superintendent of banks. The fee for filing such application shall be the sum of $50.

"It is observed that this language requires the approval of the superintendent of banks for the establishment of any branch by a state bank, and under the provision of the federal law above quoted this requirement applies equally to the establishment of a branch by a national bank."

The opinion was requested by A. A. Schramm, state superintendent of banks.

It was anticipated that the necessity for publishing these applications would hold back the establishment of some branches in eastern Oregon where at least one Portland bank had stated it would begin business July 5.
