McNARY RETURNS; SEES GOOD TIMES

Roosevelt Program Making Progress, Should be Supported, Says

Optimism over general business conditions, with doing instead of doubt getting the upper hand now, was expressed by Senator Charles L. McNary upon his return yesterday to his farm home north of Salem. Mrs. McNary accompanied him and they will remain here during the congressional recess.

Roosevelt's program supported by congress has changed complexion in this country considerably already, with all industries on the upgrade, he indicated.

While making no comment here on the public works administration's reaction to Salem's request for a loan to construct a municipal water plant, Senator McNary did say such request is given careful consideration. Especially is this so where there is possibility of duplicating a service, as in the instance of the Salem water project, which now looks like a competitive one to the Oregon-Washington Water company.

McNary says practicability rather than priority rules in granting of these project loans, and that it is said by Secretary Ickes that 10 unworthy and impractical requests are made to every worthy one.

The senior Oregon senator, whose ranking as minority leader has added greatly to his labors, declared that President Roosevelt has the opportunity to administer the new laws and authority, and indicated he believed this to be for the greatest public welfare.

DELEGATES FETED BY HOP GROWERS

Temperance aim is Stressed At Luncheon for wet Convention Voters

Nearly 225 persons crowded into the Marion hotel dining room yesterday noon for the informal luncheon given by the Oregon Hop Growers' association in compliment to the repeal delegates in convention here during the day.

Dean Walker of Independence, president of the state group, presided at the affair, which was largely in nature of a festive occasion over the turn of tide for the hop industry. Repeal has been only one of the ends toward which the hop growers, as a permanent association, will work, Walker said, indicating the desire of growers for a real temperance in the liquor status.

Quick acclaim greeted Mrs. David Honeyman of Portland, a delegate to the convention and chairman of the Oregon organization for national prohibition reform; and also ex-Mayor George Baker of Portland. Baker pledged his support to the new program thus: "If this can lend any assistance in putting Oregon back in the ranks of common sense, I'm for it."

Mayor Douglas McKay welcomed the visiting delegates to the city. Other repeal leaders and workers who spoke briefly were Miss Lillian Harris of New York City, Mrs. Louis Lachmund of Salem, president of the county reform unit; and Mrs. C. S. Jackson of Portland, a delegate and member of the state reform group executive committee; John Beckman, legislator; and Dr. W. S. Knox of Portland, chairman of the state liquor control commission.

Dr. Knox told the group he hop at the end of the commission study to give to the people of Oregon, both wets and drys, something that would work to the best interests of all.

Musical features were songs by the American Legion auxiliary championship trio and solo by Clayton V. Bernhard.

CRICKET PEST AND HEAT ENCOUNTERED

Frentress Writes That he Just Missed Tragedy Of Engine Blast

Hot days without any maybe about it; hordes of crickets that lay waste a land; three-minute leeway from a train catastrophe; diseases attacking pigs and hogs in Iowa—these are some of the things recounted by Jim Frentress, formerly of the Model Food cafe but now of Danbury, Ia.

He writes friends here that weather encountered at Blackfoot, Idaho, en route to Iowa, was 113 degrees at 6 p. m., and that Danbury has produced three days in a row of 97-degree warmth.

He witnessed about 15 miles from Blackfoot, droves of crickets a mile and a half square. The crickets are about three inches long and travel in the large droves at a rate of a mile per night. The farmers kill them by digging trenches into which the crickets are enticed and then sprayed with kerosene. Of them he says further:

"This is the first sign of crickets since they came so thick a good many years ago when the Mormons prayed for the locusts and killed three persons and injured 11.

Many Iowa farmers are vaccinating their pigs and hogs for cholera, which is causing heavy losses this summer. Iowans say the summer is the driest in 50 years. Frentress ends by saying the Willamette valley is still the place to live.
