Quotations Held not Justified: First Melons Appear PORTLAND, Aug. 9 .- (AP)-

Egg market prices in Portland were quotable on a basis where little actual business was being done. A late survey of the market disclosed the fact that either lower prices were being openly quoted or in many instances rebates were being made. Both of these have an unsettling influence upon the market. As quotable, Portland was the highest egg market along the coast. which neither supply nor demand justified. Receipts of eggs continued quite liberal with an increasing supply of the smaller sorts. The outflow of cold storage stock was also a factor. Market on butter remained quiet although there was a scramble for needs of real extras. which were very scarce and justify higher prices instead of the lower score recently boosted by the produce exchange. There was further gain in the

with a continuance of the fight between dealers. First regular shipment of Oregon watermelons of the season was reported from Irrigon. The stock is of quality, good sizes and well flavored. Prices around 2c pound or about the same as Cali-

demand for live chickens locally
