Folsom Asks Tomlin to be Kept Here; Marion Desires Return There

Marion county won't prosecute Jack Tomlin, an escapee of Folsom prison who was arrested for larceny of a section house at Turner, Sheriff A. C. Burk yesterday wired the warden at Folsom.

This decision was reached following conference with Judge McMahon, who held that it was foolish for Oregon to expend $350 in keeping Tomlin in prison here two years when he has 6 1/2 years to serve on his California sentence. In the south he was apprehended as Joe Carr.

Tomlin or Carr was arraigned here early this week, admitted guilt and sentenced to two years in prison. Then it developed he was an escapee. Officials here got in touch with the Folsom warden, and he asked that the prosecution be carried on here, with Tomlin to be returned there when he had served time here.

Marion county officials didn't see it this way. No further word had been received from the south last night.

BATTLES GETS YEAR ON HIT-RUN COUNT

Everett Battles, arrested last month as hit-run driver of the car which fatally injured Wah Hong, Chinese, pleaded guilty before Judge McMahan yesterday morning and was sentenced to a year in the county jail.

Parole was denied. Battles is ordered to appear before Sheriff A. C. Burk Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock to start serving the sentence.

In denying request for parole, Judge L. H. McMahon said in part: "If Wah Hong had been killed at a street corner intersection I'd feel this man should go to the penitentiary. . . . For the safety of the traveling public I cannot afford to let him go."

William J. Linfoot was defense attorney, Fred Holder, Hobart Smith, Lawrence Imhah and father and mother of Battles all appeared as character witnesses. Battles said he had not been in trouble before, and had resided here nearly 13 years.
