CHILDREN UNDER 16 BARRED FROM WORK

Ruling Does not Apply to Hop-Picking, States Gram

After August 31 of this year no person under the age of 16 years can be employed by any individual or concern operating under provisions of the National Recovery Act, C. H. Gram, state labor commissioner and secretary of the state welfare commission, announced Saturday.

Gram declared that agriculture was exempted from the operation of the NRA and that his announcement would not prevent persons under 16 years old from working in the hop yards. The labor commissioner estimated that the Willamette valley hop growers would employ approximately 15,000 pickers, while a large number of persons would be employed in kindred occupations. Reports received by Gram indicated that hop picking would get under way in some of the yards later in the month. He said the peak of the picking season would not be reached until the second week in September.

Gram said a recent survey of labor conditions in Oregon had insured the hop growers that there would be no shortage of labor and that it would not be necessary to employ persons living outside of the state. This survey extended into every county in Oregon and was declared by Gram a correct barometer of labor conditions. A circular letter entering Oregon in search of employment, either temporary or permanent, has been sent to the officials of Washington, California, Idaho and other western states.

At a conference with members of the state welfare commission in Portland Friday night, Gram was authorized to adopt a minimum wage scale of 85 cents per 100 pounds for bean pickers. Growers previously have paid from 50 to 85 cents per 100 pounds for this work. The new wage schedule for bean pickers will become effective August 21. Complaints filed recently with Gram indicated that in many cases pickers had received less than 75 cents for eight hours work. The bean growers expressed a willingness to cooperate with the welfare commission despite the fact the price of beans has decreased nearly 40 per cent during the past three years.

NO MORATORIUM FOR MOTORISTS

235,000 Drivers Lack Licenses; Face Arrest Sept. 1st

All automobile operators who have failed to obtain their new drivers' license before midnight, August 31, will be subject to arrest and prosecution, William Hammond, in charge of the state motor vehicle operators' bureau, declared Saturday. He declared that there would be no moratorium, and that the state police had indicated that the law would be enforced to the letter.

The records show that there are approximately 225,000 automobile drivers in the state, which averages two to each vehicle on the highways. Of this number 235,000 drivers have not yet obtained their new license under the 1933 legislative act. On June 3, when the fee for a drivers' license was increased from 50 cents to $1, approximately 87,000 operators had obtained their permits. A small percentage of these applicants were new drivers who had not previously operated a car.

In an effort to handle applications for drivers' licenses as rapidly as possible between now and September 1, a dozen or more persons have been added to the operating personnel of the operators' bureau. Other employees will be enlisted as the demand for licenses increases.

Check Eyesight and Hearing
Hammond declared that the issuance of drivers' licenses was more complicated and required more time than automobile registrations. In making application for renewals the applicant is required to bring his previous card up to date as well as set out whether he has been involved in any traffic accidents. He also must include in his application the condition of his physical and mental faculties with special reference to eyesight and hearing. In many cases the applicants are required to submit to an eye test to determine whether their vision is good, and if not so, whether it can be corrected by wearing glasses.

Persons who have been unfortunate enough to lose an arm or leg, and are otherwise crippled, also must submit to an examination. The records of the bureau show that in many cases where eye sight is faulty the applicants have been able to obtain a license following brief treatment. All beginners are required to take the examination involving both physical and mental condition and rules of the road.

"We are making every effort to take care of the applications as they are filed," Hammond said, "but we now are confronted with the almost impossible task of issuing 235,000 permits between now and September 1. The eleventh hour rush will be much the same as experienced during the registration period, and it is possible that many applicants will be disappointed."

Applications for drivers' licenses have increased materially during the past week, although there are hundreds of operators within a stone's throw of the statehouse who have not yet responded to the call.

The new law which provides for the issuance of new drivers' licenses every two years was enacted by the 1933 legislature for the purpose of ridding the operators' file of deadwood, checking up on new drivers, and partly compensating the state for the loss of funds resulting from the reduction of automobile license to $5 a year. Drivers who obtained their licenses prior to June 3 paid a fee of only 50 cents, but were required to submit to the examination.

Hammond said he had discovered that a large number of automobile operators have been driving their cars without licenses due to the inability of the police to check all permits. Beginning September 1, the state police will launch a campaign to determine whether all drivers have obtained their current cards. Officials said this drive would continue indefinitely, and that persons who have failed to comply with the law will be cited to appear before the courts and explain to the judges.

"It is our hope," Hammond concluded, "that arrests will not be necessary and that every person driving an automobile in Oregon will comply with the provisions of the law."

Approximately 53 per cent of California voters went to the polls at the repeal election in June.

SCHOCK ESCAPES FROM WORK CREW

Clifford M. Schock, 29, the man who stole the city dog catcher's automobile here early last month, escaped yesterday from a state hospital working crew and was being sought by city and state police. They were informed that he had traded his striped institutional shirt for a tan shirt at a residence here and had started hitch-hiking.

Police described Schock as a "tough customer" and were apprehensive over his next moves. Schock was arrested at Roseburg last month with the car he had stolen from Carl Radke, dog catcher here, and sent to the state hospital upon his return to Salem. When first brought here, Schock attempted to place blame for the car theft on an Oakland, Calif., boy whom he had picked up on the highway.
