dustry here to meet at Labor hall at 7:30 o'clock tonight to discuss organization as provided for labor under the NRA. The call was directed to service station attendants as well as to garage employees.

The Salem Shoe Repairers' association last night adopted a code of fair competition which President V. E. Kuhn said would bring the trade here definitely under all requirements of NRA. All but one of the repair shops in Salem agreed to abide by the code, he said. The code sets a price list, working hours and wages, which will be announced in the near future. It is similar to that adopted in other northwest cities.

Further discussion of NRA provisions was engaged last night by the Salem Radiotronics association, meeting at the chamber of commerce.

About 35 real estate dealers of the city signed to comply with NRA regulations at the Monday night meeting at the chamber of commerce. William P. Ellis, general for the NRA campaign in this district, told the group of the various regulations and the reality men's code.

Early in the morning of old Iowa, is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture of "The Stranger's Return," the new Phil Stone novel of rural life, which opens today at the Elsinore theatre.

King Vidor has again given the screen a living drama in his unusual film, "The Birth of a Nation," which has been made in his graphic character. All the rugged beauty and simplicity of farm life is as real as the scope of photography permits.

Miss Hopkins is co-starred with Lionel Barrymore.

The new feature is Stone's second novel, "The State Fair," which is a hit on the screen as well as book sales. We are inclined to predict that his new effort will eclipse the smashing success of his first work.

SALES TAX URGED FOR STATE RELIEF

states one third and that above that states must pledge two thirds of money expended. The one third allowance for the next three months, amounting to $300,000 would not take care of the needy for October, Raymond Wilcox, chairman of the state relief committee declared.

County Relief Men Will Be Questioned
No definite action was taken as a result of the conference today, but Governor Meier announced he would confer further with county relief committees and others before deciding upon a program and the calling of a special session.

While all remedies suggested came back to a sales tax, no definite percentage nor definite tax was suggested, other than that made by Charles V. Galloway, chairman of the state tax commission, that it should be a straight retail tax without exemptions and without tax services. The funds, he stated should be used for two definite purposes and so set out in the bill—relief and for school districts.

Wilcox stated that between five and six million dollars would be required for relief by the end of 1934, in addition to relief afforded through the NRA program. Of this sum the state or municipalities would have to provide two-thirds. He stated that at the present time there were 30,000 families receiving relief.

Thirty Thousand Families Need Aid
"Thirty thousand families means that at least 120,000 people in Oregon are in need, and that many more are unemployed but have not yet called for food. This is more than the NRA and public works programs can handle, even though they state they can take care of about 40,000 people the next year," Wilcox said.

Pierce Williams, representing the federal relief administrator, stated that unless the federal government were assured the state would raise its share of the funds no advance would be made. He stated that Washington had issued bonds in the amount of $10,000,000 and California $20,000,000.

But the mention of bond issuance brought immediate protest from several of those present, particularly Leslie Scott, chairman of the state highway commission, who declared the state could not raise this money by bonds, nor could it place this burden upon property tax. Scott said that the highway commission did not sell its last issue but Portland banks took the bonds out of public duty.

Stokke readily admitted the plot, according to Chief Straub.

"We wanted money, and figured we could get it by extorting the county," Stokke said. "There isn't much more to be said now except that I'm sorry that we went so far that Bob had to be killed."

Stokke said their death threats probably would not have been carried out, had Goodroe not complied with their instructions.

W. F. Eifert, president of the Free-water Prune Growers co-operative expressed in effect what others testified to when he said that "the present situation is terrible, and our only hope is in the new deal and we are praying for federal supervision for this year's crop."

As today's session closed it appeared possible that those objecting to the details of the present plan would be content to present specific proposals for amendment tomorrow and be governed by the result of discussion on them, so that the report that goes back to Washington may be sufficiently unanimous to insure early approval of an agreement by the secretary of agriculture.

SLEEPING SICKNESS CLAIMS 16 VICTIMS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The death of an elderly woman, reported late today, sent the total for the epidemic of "sleeping sickness" to 16—about one out of every 11 cases.

Mrs. Fidelia Walker, 78, died yesterday in the Missouri Baptist hospital under the care of Dr. Paul Zentgraf, who said she was not diagnosed as encephalitis until an autopsy was performed today.

The number of reported cases rose to 183 today, including 145 from St. Louis county and 37 from the city.

An intensive study of the disease was under way, Dr. Paul Zentgraf, assistant city health commissioner, said tonight.

August E. Koenig wants freedom from Anna Roda Koenig, whom he married in Chicago in July, 1924. There is one child. He charges cruel and inhuman treatment, and says among other things that defendant once smashed him in the nose with a house slipper. The child is in Chicago with the defendant.

It is expected that the appointment of other workers in the La Grande and Klamath districts will be announced within a few days and the state unit of the corporation will be ready for complete operation. An attorney, a chief appraiser and deputy appraisers and attorneys for Multnomah county are also yet to be appointed.

Linfield Leader Stresses Value Of Liberal Arts

Education in the liberal arts is of more value to the average student, especially during his first two years in college, than more specialized training, Dr. Elam J. Anderson, president of Linfield college, told members of the Kiwanis club at their luncheon meeting yesterday.

Dr. Anderson told of the new attitude toward vocational training which demands that the pupil study not just what appeals to him at the moment but the subjects which will be helpful to him in the work he is most fitted to undertake.

The educated crook came in for a scolding by the educator, who claimed training in citizenship and ethics more valuable than the classic features of university curricula.

MINNESOTA BALLOT LESS CUMBERSOME

Boyer Finds Advantages and Passes Sample on to State Official

County Clerk U. G. Boyer yesterday forwarded to Dave O'Hara, in the election department of the secretary of state, a sample ballot from the state of Minnesota.

The ballot is considerably more simple than the Oregon one, and has, Mr. Boyer points out, the merit of grouping together all names for which one vote is as good as a dozen.

For instance, on the prohibition repeal which comes before Minnesota September 13, the names of anti-prohibitionists are listed together on only one check mark is necessary to indicate the voter's sentiment, just as the other side is also listed on the ballot so as to need but one vote.

This grouping also makes the ballot less long and cumbersome. Each ballot contains the signature of the secretary of state and the amendment.

In Minnesota, a sample ballot is published in each newspaper for a certain period of time. Mr. Boyer noticed the ballot in his home paper, from Wadena, Minn.

Mr. Boyer also says Minnesota is undertaking a survey of unemployed youths, ages 17 to 24, to determine how many are desirous of continuing their high school or college education if some plan is worked out by the state to furnish educational facilities to the unemployed who desire it.

Such school work will probably be carried on through efforts of the university extension department.

The financial drive consists of selling drum corps stickers from 25 cents up according to the donors' ability to contribute. Concerns whose members and employees subscribe 100 per cent are given yellow drum corps cards for display.

Director E. A. Bradfield spoke to quiet rumors that the Washington school was to be closed. He and the other directors said the rumor was ungrounded, though Clifford had suggested construction of a new building there.

Dependent upon receiving a contract from the McLean Transportation company, the board agreed to contract with the Polk county non-high school board for transportation of pupils to Salem high schools.

The board empowered Superintendent Hug to arrange for transporting grade pupils from the Riverside corner of the district and also from along Silverton road.

At the close of the day each side had used seven of the allotted 20 challenges and on that basis alone at least two more days would be required to select the jury.

SELECTING LAMSON JURY IS SLOW JOB

COURT HOUSE, San Jose, Calif., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Through another hot, humid day the slow, tedious process of selecting a jury wound its way today but at the close the "chosen twelve" in whose hands will rest the fate of David A. Lamson, the handsome 31 year old press representative, accused of murder, was still unchosen.

Numerous prospective jurors walked into the jury box after their names had been drawn from an octagon-shaped, black and gold enamel box on the desk of the clerk of Judge R. R. Syer's court. Each in turn was put through the same formula of questioning and in most cases left the jury box on challenges or for prejudicial cause.

At the close of the day each side had used seven of the allotted 20 challenges and on that basis alone at least two more days would be required to select the jury.

The octagon-shaped clerk's box, however, proved the most fascinating point of today's proceedings for Lamson. Each time the clerk spun the box the defendant's attention was riveted
