PENSION BLANKS TO BE MADE STANDARD

Boyer Expects 36 Counties To Agree Before new law Is Operative Jan. 1

U. G. Boyer, county clerk, yesterday received samples of old age pension application blanks now being used in Minnesota which recently adopted an old-age pension law. Boyer intends to turn them over to state officials to aid them in preparing a standard blank for old-age pension applications in the 36 counties of the state. The three blank Minnesota uses includes one used for the original application to the person who seeks a pension, a blank filled out by an examiner and given to the county pension board, and triplicate blanks setting a time for hearing the petitioner's statement.

Counties Not Ready
While Oregon's old-age pension law is operative next January 1 and almost daily inquiries are being made at the courthouse about it, few if any counties have taken definite steps to prepare to administer the law. It is expected members of county courts from all parts of the state will unite on preparing standard blanks and also in prescribing rules, as allowed by law, for handling pension applications.

Marion county will need to make a substantial appropriation in its 1934 budget for the old-age pension system. Estimates on additional outgo have run as high as $100,000 annually for this county. No one knows just how much will be required, and estimates are mainly guesses. Persons over 70, residents of the United States and of Oregon for 15 years and residents of the county for two years, may be granted a pension up to $30 a month. They must allow the county a lien against all property they own, up to the amount of the pension. If the petitioner has relatives who can support him or has any substantial amount of property, the pension will not be allowed. The old-age pension law will be administered by each county court which will receive applications, examine them, hold hearings and finally order or reject pensions.

Insurance Murder Couple Executed In Electric Chair

STATE'S PRISON, McAlester, Okla., Aug. 25.—(Friday)—(AP)—George Oliver, 18, the youngest person ever to die in Oklahoma's electric chair, was executed yesterday with his uncle, Claude Oliver, for the "insurance murder" of Claude's girl bride. The 15-year-old girl wife, whom Claude Oliver married last August, and shortly thereafter insured for $5000, was beaten to death last November 3, and her body left in an automobile which was hurled from a bridge near Davis. A negro allegedly was paid $25 to "witness" the ostensible accident. The two confessed that Claude drove the car while his nephew struck the girl-bride with a heavy file. Later, the husband held her while his nephew delivered the fatal blows with a tire iron.

10 Million Acres Of Cotton Gone

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The plows that have been performing a heretofore unheard-of task—turning under cotton in August—today were idle with government officials estimating they had destroyed 10,000,000 acres or more in their campaign to curb production and increase the price of the staple. These figures were unofficial. Farm administration directors said they would not know for days just how many acres were plowed up by the growers who had contracted to demolish in a few days the stalks it had taken months to grow.

Prison Believed Bad Money Center

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., was combed today by United States secret service and justice department agents for evidence that counterfeiting was being carried on behind its walls by inmates. Happy Days Here Again, Elk Killers

For the first time since 1907, hunters in Oregon can kill elk this fall—but only for three days and then under rigid restrictions. The state game commission this week informed U. G. Boyer, county clerk, about the provisions of the newly opened season: Only October 23, 24 and 25 will be open season days. Territory where elk can be hunted is limited to counties in the northeasternmost part of the state, centering in the Willows district.

Before going after elk, a hunter must secure a tag from the county clerk, paying $2.50 therefor. Only a bull elk with two or more points can be shot. The tag must be secured irrespective of whether or not an elk is killed. No rebate will be made if an animal is not bagged. Non-resident hunters must have a non-license hunting permit and must pay $50 for a tag. The state game commission estimates there are 9500 elk in the eastern Oregon district, 1700 on the Coast range and 800 in the Cascade mountains. One elk's tag has already been issued by the county clerk's office here.

COAL AND AUTO CODES LAGGING

Meantime, 11 additional industries were given authority to substitute their own hour and wage provisions for those of the president's re-employment agreement and to come under the blue eagle immediately. All retained the 40-hour work week for mechanical employes but with flexibility to allow more time during rush periods.

The 11 were: sewing machine manufacturers, feed manufacturers, flat glass distributors, country grain elevators, paper distributors, baking powder makers, men's neckwear, earthenware, washing and ironing machine manufacturers and flavoring extract and soda water flavoring makers. At the same time the Telephone Manufacturing association, covering telephone apparatus and appliance manufacturers exclusive of the Western Electric withdrew a pending proposed code and announced it would comply with the electrical manufacturers' code, in force since August 4.

A new problem was raised by operators of large New York department stores, when they broke openly over the terms of the retail code of fair practice which is now up for hearing.

Stras Objects to Price Regulation
B. H. Namm, speaking for 14 stores, urged inclusion in the code of some regulation of prices and advertising. Percy S. Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., opposed both price fixing and any advertising "censorship."

Described by Namm as designed to "curb predatory or destructive price cutting," the provision was presented prohibiting retail sales at less than invoice cost, plus 10 per cent partially to cover labor costs and overhead. Other proposals would forbid general underselling claims or references in advertising to competitors.

FIRST OF 2 WIDOWS WINS FROM SECOND

Modifying the county court's decree, Circuit Judge Lowelling yesterday ruled in the matter of the estate of John W. Heldecke, deceased, that one widow, Christiana Heldecke of Pennsylvania, was entitled to dower interest in real property and that another widow, Georgiana K. Heldecke of this region, was not entitled to such interest. Heldecke had been married to two women and no evidence was put in to show that a divorce had ever been granted the first, whom he married in Pennsylvania many years ago. Coming west after having become father of two daughters, now Ruby Clark and Grace Brown of Pennsylvania, Heldecke here married the second wife and they became parents of a daughter, Helen Fluke. Judge Lowelling held that the sole heirs at law to the estate are the first wife and her daughters. He declared void a will Heldecke made leaving all of his estate to the second wife and her daughter and ordered the estate distributed one-third to Ruby Clark, one-third to Grace Brown, subject to their mother's dower right, and the remaining third to the second wife and her daughter.

Heldecke left an estate consisting of property in Polk county, a timber claim near Mill City and considerable personal property.

G. Greeley, secretary-manager of the association, and John D. Tennant, of Longview, both of whom have just returned from Washington.
