TRANSFER STUDENT REGISTRATIONS DUE

Students entering Salem high school this year from schools outside the Salem school system should register some time this week. Principal Fred Wolf said yesterday. By early registration a good deal of confusion for students and school authorities will be saved, he declared.

Pupils from Salem schools have already completed registration, and their program cards, completely filled out will be given to them September 18 when all Salem schools will open.

Wolf refused to estimate this fall's enrollment of the high school yesterday, saying that much depended upon the availability of work for high school boys and upon the systems of transportation being worked out by school districts.

COWDEN RECEIVER OF FISCHER FIRM

While R. A. Cowden of Silverton was yesterday named receiver of the Fischer Flouring Mills company at that city, it is doubtful if he will qualify, counsel for the bondholders announced. Unless objections are filed to the cost bill in the foreclosure proceedings, bondholders will ask that the mill property be at once sold to satisfy their lien.

Cowden's bond was placed at $2,500 in a decree signed by Judge Arlie G. Walker before whom the foreclosure proceedings were heard. The judge in a memorandum opinion recently, held the $100,000 mortgage against the mill property past due and indicated the decree, handed down Thursday, would be granted.

The First National Bank of Salem as trustee for the bonds, instituted the suit.

LAW SCHOOL WILL GAIN ENROLLMENT

Many Planning Courses as Basis for Business or Other Work, Noted

Willamette university college of law will open September 20 with the largest enrollment in the 50 years of its existence. Approximately thirty-five students will enter the first-year law class, while about 45 will enroll for the first time as pre-law students. There will be a slight increase in the number enrolling in the upper classes both as law and pre-law students. Dean Roy M. Lockenour states that many of these students will never enter the active practice of law, since there is an ever increasing number studying law in preparation for business or for other fields of service.

Space in the law library has been approximately doubled, one room being added for the use of typewriters. This is a facility enjoyed by only a few libraries in the entire country. The reorganized faculty consists of ten members, all with long experience both in the practice of law and in teaching. Besides the dean it includes C. M. Inman, Willis S. Moore, Ray L. Smith, William P. Ellis, Victor R. Griggs, Walter E. Keyes, Max Page, William H. Trindle and Edward M. Gillingham. Prof. Inman is the senior law teacher of the northwest, having taught at Willamette for over twenty-five years.

Prominent members of the bench and bar who will give special lectures for the year are Judge Harry H. Belt of the state supreme court; Circuit Judge James T. Band, Marshfield; Circuit Judge James W. Crawford, Portland; Judge James Alger Fee of the U. S. district court, Portland; State Senator John D. Goss, Marshfield; Charles B. McCulloch, specialist in public utilities law, Portland; Arthur I. Moulton, specialist in negligence law, Portland; George Mowrey, chief deputy district attorney, Portland; George Neuner, former U. S. district attorney, Portland; Albert B. Ridgeway, ex-president Oregon Bar association, Portland; Judge George Rossman, state supreme court; Roy F. Shields, solicitor for the Union Pacific railway, Portland, and Circuit Judge Robert Tucker, Portland.

Officials Given Forms to Record Needs of Budget

All courthouse officials this month will receive forms on which tentative budget estimates for 1934 are to be made out. The county court, faced with the necessity of preparing the 1934 budget one month early under new Oregon laws, will name its budget committee within a short time.

Problems facing the court in framing the new budget include provision for the old-age pension law, effective January 1, 1934, provision for a state tax on real property, paid this year out of road fund surplus and not levied on property, and provision for unemployment relief.

Mrs. Yeager Has Many Prizes for Making of Candy

Mrs. Bertha Yeager of 2030 Virginia street certainly knows her candy-making. Mrs. Yeager entered 11 kinds of home-made candy in the state fair and ten varieties won prizes. Out of the ten, seven were first awards and three second.

Miss Frances Welch judged the candy exhibit, and had the pleasure of sampling the following varieties of Mrs. Yeager's prize-winning confections: fudge, peanut brittle, caramels, fruit candy, chocolate coated cherries, chocolate coated lemon cremes, chocolate coated brazil nuts, honey fruit loaf and fudge, honey coated chocolate, all first prizes; and divinity, chocolate melba cremes and chocolate coated pineapple, second prizes.

SUCCESS FOR NRA MOTT PREDICTION

"The success of the NRA is not up to the people, it is up to President Roosevelt. He has the authority, and all the people are in favor of it. It is theoretically sound and there is no reason why it should not succeed. The president is brainy. I look for return of prosperity before long, and better and brighter days." Thus spoke Representative James W. Mott to the Lions club at its noon meeting at the Gray Belle restaurant Thursday.

Mr. Mott said that there is no act so important passed in the last quarter century. He stated that he had supported the act but also claimed that it was not properly named. "It is really an act of federal regulation of private business," stated Mr. Mott. "It gives power to control its own business. The codes must be fair to competition, fair to industry, fair to workers and fair to the buying public. It will control productions, fix wages, fix hours and fix profits," continued Mr. Mott.

Mr. Mott stated that there were 12 million people out of work. He stated that this unemployment had been caused over a period of time through human progress and the development of machinery which would do the work a thousand men did a half century ago.

Delay Desired In Bank Action

A. A. Schramm, liquidator of the Bank of Stayton, insolvent, filed answer yesterday along with J. P. Dittmer, co-defendant in a suit for foreclosure brought by George A. Sander. Schramm says the action should not proceed while a move is under way to re-finance plaintiff's claim. If the court does not wish to stay the procedure, a minimum sale price should be set, defendants contend. Schramm alleges the Dittmer place of 220 acres has a minimum value of $8000 against which the state has a judgment for $3120 and costs.
