pistol butts. Burklow was forced to open the outer gate.

Looking for money and weapons, the convicts entered the prison clerk's office outside the walls. One of a half dozen clerks in the office, Finley P. Carson, became confused and failed to observe a chorus of orders shouted at him.

Bullets struck him almost simultaneously in the leg and in the shoulder. The desperadoes finished ransacking the office, and fled when they heard an alarm sounded inside the prison.

As they fled, they encountered Sheriff Charles Hill of Corydon, Ind., who had brought several prisoners to the penitentiary. They overpowered him, took his weapons, and forced him to carry four of them away in his automobile. No further word was received of Hill.

A short distance down the highway, the other forced the driver of an automobile carrying two women to head his car into a ditch. They rode away with the driver, leaving the women behind. The driver was freed later at nearby Gary.

Warden Louis H. Kujkel and Chief Clerk H. C. Crosby gave the names of the escaped prisoners and offenses: for which they were sentenced as: Joseph Jenkins, life for murder; Edward Shouse, 25 years, auto robbery; Russell Clark, 20 years, bank robbery; Joseph Fox, life for bank robbery; Walter Dieterich, life for bank robbery; John Burns, life for murder; Harry Pierpont, 10 to 21 years for robbery; Ray Badgley, life for bank robbery; John Hamilton, 25 years for auto banditry, and James Clark, life for auto banditry.

the men claimed to be working longer hours than specified in the NRA code, but that a misunderstanding apparently had arisen due to an exception made for tool and die makers in the Tool and Die Manufacturer's association re-employment agreement.

Because of conditions peculiar to the industry, he said, tool or die designers or makers are permitted to work a maximum of 48 hours a week, while the maximum for other employers is 40 hours. He said the exception was authorized by J. G. Cowling, chief of the exceptions committee of the national recovery administration.

500 Mark Reached In Enrollment at Local University

Willamette university's official enrollment reached 500 yesterday, N. S. Savage, treasurer, announced. From 10 to 25 more students are expected to matriculate this fall. The fall enrollment last year was about 525.

University officials say the local school's enrollment is highly gratifying and compares favorably with the percentage of attendance to the 1932 marks made at other schools in the state. Willamette's annual tuition in the liberal arts school is $130 to which the student fees and other costs are added.

cities have signified their intentions of joining the celebration.

of others accused in the Urschel kidnaping.

Federal agents had been trailing Kelly for weeks. They said they almost trapped him two weeks ago in San Antonio, Texas, but he fled a few minutes before they arrived at the house in which he was staying.

Kelly had less than $10 in his pockets when he was searched. His wife had about $7 in her purse.

"Tell the world I'll be out of this jail before long," Kelly boasted shortly after he had been arrested.

In addition to the Urschel kidnaping, Kelly may face trial in Chicago for his alleged participation in the slaying of Policeman Miles Cunningham during the robbery of two federal reserve messengers last Friday.

H. S. CONSTITUTION VOTE SLATED SOON

An entirely rewritten constitution featuring no radical changes will be discussed and voted upon next week by the Salem high school student body. Notable among the few innovations is the provision for ex-officio membership on the student council of student athletic, forensic and publications managers. A clause providing for the recall of unsatisfactory officers is also a new feature.

Minute Men, active representatives of the council selling student body tickets, tags and other student activity tickets, have been a part of high school life for eight or nine years. The new constitution makes them a legal reality and provides for their organization into a society. Student body dues remain at the old $2 price but may be paid in semester installments under the new constitution.

The constitution was drawn up last year by a committee of students.

North Santiam Route Decision Expected Soon

Completion of preliminary surveys on two lines for the proposed North Santiam highway routes between Mill City and Mehama by Engineer J. F. McGee and his county crew yesterday made possible the completion within two or three weeks of final surveys and tpoographical maps by a state highway crew. The highway department will choose either the approximate route of the road from Taylor's camp or one further down hill along the river.

As one of the main objects of this road job is to furnish employment, it is expected work on this route will be begun as soon as the route is selected.

BRIDGE TOURNEY'S DIRECTOR IS HERE

able. Tickets will be printed, numbered by pairs and sold in consecutive order.

Can we use any system we like in bidding?

Yes. The different systems add zest to the bidding and play.

How large will sections be?

Nine tables in each section. The sections are kept small to avoid confusion and delay.

What laws will govern the tournament?

It is only recently that a code of laws has been promulgated for duplicate play. This code was presented by a joint committee representing (1) American Bridge league, (2) United States Bridge association and (3) American Whist league. No effort was spared to formulate laws which would be adequate in every situation, and yet would impose no unnecessary restrictions to interfere with the enjoyment of the game. The code of laws will be published in full in The Oregon Statesman.

The following general rules concerning the tournament have been drawn up by The Statesman in cooperation with Mrs. Quinn and Miss Harrild:

1. Play will begin each Tuesday evening promptly at 8 p. m. at the Marion hotel, and will continue each Tuesday night from October 3 to November 21, inclusive.

2. No experience in tournament play whatever is required but players are limited to residence in Marion, Polk and Linn counties.

3. Entries must be made in pairs and the same pair will play together throughout the evening. As the tournament awards will go to individual scores, pairs may change from one evening to another.

4. Play will be in sections of not to exceed nine tables each with prizes for high players and runners-up in each section as well as for high scores for entire evening.

5. In submitting scores for grand prize, any six evenings' scores out of eight may be entered, so failure to play one or two nights will not disqualify a player or a pair.

6. High scores will be announced from week to week in The Statesman.

7. Play will be on duplicate boards under nationally accepted tournament rules; each player after he has bid and played a hand, will have opportunity to see what the preceding player bid on the same hand and what was made.

8. Each player must secure a ticket before the play from the Marion hotel. Tickets cost 50 cents a player and from this sum prizes and all tournament costs are defrayed.

9. Mixed pairs — a man and woman, a man and man or a woman and a woman—are all welcome to enter.

10. The ticket you secure will give your assignment to your table and your position, i. e. north and south or east and west. Groups who wish to play in the same section can buy tickets simultaneously; otherwise your position will entirely depend on your ticket which is sold in numerical order.

Investors Show Little Interest In Sewer Bonds

Investors to date have evinced no interest in the $25,000 issue of Salem sewer bonds for which bids have been called, City Recorder Poulsen said yesterday. Neither bids nor inquiries relative to the issue have been received at his office. The bids must be submitted by 7:30 p. m. October 2 for consideration by the city council that night.

The bonds are 4½ per cent serials, the last of a $500,000 issue approved by the people several years ago.

Amateur Players Assemble Tonight

Reorganization of Chemeketa Players, Salem's own play producers, will be the order of business at the opening of the second season's activities at Nelson auditorium, Chemeketa and Liberty streets, at 7:30 o'clock tonight. To this meeting all old members of the group are invited and others who are seriously interested in play production. Plans for the reorganization have been formulated, and it is expected the group will emerge on a broader and more popular basis. Widespread interest has been manifested concerning renewed activity of the players and an especially successful season is forecast.

mission probably will be asked to exact a promise from N. and R. Selig that no intoxicating liquor would ever be sold in their proposed store at 14th and D streets, near Olinger field, if the zone is changed to permit erection of the store, directors indicated. The board decided to adhere to its old rule of refusing to sign any petition in zoning cases.

Action taken by the board included appropriation of $200 for a retaining wall on the Leslie junior high school athletic grounds and $75 for another bicycle shed at Parrish junior high. Purchase of $324 worth of books from the Junior Literary guild was referred to the supplies committee, of which Mrs. David Wright is chairman.
