Bearcat-Teacher Game This Weekend Has Fans Guessing

AIR ATTACK BY O.N.S. FEARED

Teams Otherwise Appear to Be Well Matched: Karl Weisser on job

The universal hailing question of the week among football fans in Salem is "What will the Bearcats and the Wolves do to each other Saturday night?"

Last week end's occurrences proved that both Willamette and Oregon Normal have teams which will get by in almost any gridiron company-a Corvallis sport writer says the Bearcats are the strong est they have been in the past 11 years, though "Spec" Keene will try to tear up all copies of this statement his players might see. As far as defense against running plays is concerned, it may well be

On the other hand Willamette's pass defense was terrible, and there is no question but that Larry Wolfe, the Oregon Normal mentor, made note of this fact and will have his ace southpaw tosser, Harry Scroggins, hurling them through the air all week with plans for a veritable International Air Circus on Saturday

Willamette's Pass Defense Doubtful

Willamette's offense was no more impressive against Oregon State than it was last year under similar circumstances, but there will be this difference in the O. N. S. game as compared to the memorable one just a year ago. that this time the Bearcat attack will not be crippled as it was on that occasion with Erickson, Jones and Frantz on crutches or approximately so. This time, if all the "kinks" resulting from a severe pounding at Corvallis are ironed out, Willamette's attack will be potentially as strong as in the Stater game, with perhaps a bit more polish but no new tactics.

Oregon Normal demonstrated by defeating College of the Pacific, Amos Stagg's eleven, that Wolfe has been able to do what some fans doubted, build a clicking combination out of less experienced material than he had last year. The answer apparently is that while Wolfe has many new men, he has a first string eleven ficials of the state association of veterans with the exception of of the line where they cannot small schools unless they obtainhamper the execution of his ed a better chance for represenrazzle-dazzle plays. With Edwards, tation in the tourney; that has Mahan and Scroggins in the backfield, there is no question about ports are true, in one section of the old tricks working. Edwards down that was ruled illegal here a year ago.

Three Ex-Bearcats In Teachers' Line

Veterans in the Teachers' line ens and "Doc" Allen, former Bearcats, and Phillips, who also figured in the O. N. S. victory here in 1932. Several of the new men are veterans from college squads.

Speaking of new material at Monmouth, Wolfe had something like 43 men in uniform at Portland last Friday night, and if it comes down to a question of reserves, the Wolves will have all the edge, but reserves will probably play less part than in the Bearcat-Staters game.

In view of these various factors, the obvibus verdict is that neither the Bearcats nor the Wolves will have any outstanding advantage in the matter of straight football, and that if Keene can devise an effective pass defense and keep his boys alert to checkmate all of the Wolves' sly devices, the outcome will be determined on the "breaks," of which there may be several. The indications point to more scoring than was represented in the 6-to-0 outcome last year.

The Bearcat camp was cheered harness. Naturally he is not yet in condition and will not be ready for extensive activity Saturday

Parrish Gym to Be Used by Y.M. Hoopers is Plan

Basketball teams sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. during the coming season again will be permitted to use the Parrish high school gymnasium for practices as a result of a school board order solicited last night by C. A. Kells, Y secretary. Kells said the Y would be responsible for use of the gym and payment of the janitor. Indications are that the Y will not have sufficient facilities to care for the many teams expected to be organized, he said.

Watching the operations of the state association over a period of years, we have wondered that there was not a revolt-but of the big schools, not the little ones. There are many more small high schools in Oregon than big ones, and each has an equal voice in the operation of the association. The little fellows have ruled the roost, and their interests have been foreign to those of the big fellows. As a result we have county and district basketball tournament, and on the other hand we have no definite, organized method of picking a state football champion.

We have heard protests, and threats to withdraw, from the officials of large high schools, but no action, except that the Tuesday by the arrival of Karl Portland high schools run their Weisser, regular tackle last year, own affairs as they see fit while who returned from a trip to Chi- maintaining membership, at least cago and immediately got into some of them, in the state as-

> So it is our personal belief that the B schools have no kick coming, and furthermore that the Lane county movement will not spread far. Theoretically it is a fine, desirable thing for all the high schools in the state to be enrolled in one big organization, with uniform rules of eligibility and a board of control to iron out disputes. This board, by the way, has as far as we know, not figured in the dissatisfaction on either side in recent years. We grant that the benefits of this organization are not to be lightly tossed aside, but we fear one group or the other will, some day, unless there is more give and take, less suspicion and more willingness to see the viewpoint of the fellow in a different situation.
