Pattern

Notice how simple this model is. We planned it to be made in a couple of spare hours, hence the delightfully easy, yet attractive details. The process entails a few yards of cotton print which can be magically transformed into a house frock with chic collar, handy pockets, and semi-belted waistline. The cleverly placed dart makes it fit perfectly. It will be a grand success with busy housewives!

Pattern 1512 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 24, 28, 32, 36, 40, 44 and 46. Size 18 takes 2 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

How Grand Slam Bid was Made

By MRS. WILLIAM H. QUINN, Statesman Tourney Conductor

One of the very interesting hands played at the contract bridge tournament Tuesday night was number five in section one. Many of the players arrived at a little slam contract. In discussing the hand yesterday Mrs. William H. Quinn indicated a grand slam could be arrived at. The hand and the play follow. Neither side was vulnerable.

South

According to Mrs. Quinn, seven clubs should be reached on the bidding, by a careful and expert exchange of information between the partners.

The bidding:

South West North East
 Pass Pass 1♠ 1♠
 2♠ (1) Pass 3♠ (2) Pass
 4♠ (3) Pass 4NT (4) Pass
 5♠ (5) Pass 6♠ Pass
 7♠ Pass Pass

Analysis of the bidding:

(1) Bid of one higher in opponent's suit shows control of the first round of that suit. Partner not having bid it shows about four honor tricks and a freakish distribution. After partner has bid it does not show any definite number of honor tricks. It merely guarantees a game and suggests a slam.

(2) North's 3 Spade bid is a warning that there may be duplication of values, since he holds the Ace. He naturally assumes partner has none.

(3) Shaded biddable suit.

(4) Shows three Aces or two Aces and King in suit bid.

(5) South has not two Aces, so he denies with fine Club bid.

MOTT SCORES CUT OF VETS' PAYMENT

Recovery act However, Wins Praise From Delegate; NRA Workable

Branding the national economy act as a surrender by congress of all jurisdiction over veterans' relief, and a repeal of all existing laws on the subject, and a grant of power to the president giving him almost unlimited authority over pensions, Congressman James W. Mott vigorously assailed the economy measure adopted at the special session of congress, in an address before the Rotary club yesterday. Under it pensions were reduced to a minimum of $6 a month and a maximum of $80; and the entangling regulations cut the compensation of war-wounded veterans from 25% to 95%, averaging 54%. All presumptive cases, that is, those where war connection of the malady was presumed, were swept from the rolls, although this was partly cured before the end of the session.

Mr. Mott criticized the information which the public received out of Washington. "The correspondents there," he said, "get their material from administrators and bureau chiefs who are clever at furnishing propaganda. In the case of the economy act, public opinion had been so affected by propaganda that few people know the nature of the act," he said.

Brain Trust "Socialists"

While he condemned the economy act, Mott praised the recovery act as the most important measure passed at the special session. He lauded Roosevelt for turning for advice regarding it not to party hacks nor to his cabinet but to the professors of the brain trust.—Moley, Tugwell and Eichel, "all socialists." The recovery act, he said, would change the system by putting an end to uncontrolled individualism, and substituting government control of private business. Those in business would be protected from unfair competition at home and by embargo against foreign competition.

Congressman Mott expressed the hope and belief that NRA will work, and says that responsibility lies with the president. He expressed regret over the ousting of Raymond Moley and branded Cordell Hull as "an old political throwback." The president is the most astute politician who has sat in the White House, says Mott and he will follow the public pulse and make changes needed for success.

Regarding local legislation Mott gave the hope that rejection of Willamette upriver improvement was only temporary. "I shall ask for a new survey," he said, "and hope eventually to get the project on the approved list."

Now, he explained, congress hasn't much to say about rivers and harbors, the job having been turned over to the army engineers.

GRAB DISCLAIMED BY TILLAMOOK MEN

PWA Road Program Favored Without Intent to rob Rest of State, say

Residents of Tillamook county probably would support virtually any legitimate road construction program for 1933 on a provided funds are obtained from direct federal grants or under the public works act. This was indicated Tuesday when a delegation of prominent leaders of that district conferred with R. H. Baldoek, state highway engineer, and other officials. The conference had to do with the proposal to construct two short roads from Portland to the sea.

"The people of Tillamook county have no desire to rob the remainder of the state of money it is entitled to, and we are not asking that funds obtained under the public works act be spent exclusively on our roads," H. T. Botts, spokesman for the group, declared. "If a loan program can be formulated which would insure the construction of other roads as well as our own, we would support it."

Botts said that 35 per cent of the timber damaged in the recent forest fire in Tillamook county could be salvaged provided it can be transported to the mills within the next two or three years. He declared that the Wilson river road would provide the most direct route for these operations.

Several members of the delegation will appear before the state highway commission at its next meeting in Portland Thursday.
