NAZIS PERSECUTE NON-CONFORMISTS

Dick Neuberger, who was editor of the Oregon Emerald at the state university last year, and who during the summer toured Europe with his uncle, Commander Neuberger, surgical officer in the navy, discussed the Nazi persecution of the Jews and other dissenting groups as he had observed it. His uncle had visited Germany 14 times, was well acquainted with many German people, and so they were able to get information which individuals were afraid to breathe to Germans, so complete is the espionage system of Hitler.

Hitler's rise to eminence is based on his theory of telling the people the crudest and most stupid tales, which he developed in his term in a prison where he was confined for his part in an abortive revolution; also on the treaty of Versailles which condemned the German people to an inferior status among nations.

Horrible tales could be related, said Neuberger; and he told of one woman whose husband had been summoned from his home at night by storm troopers. Later she was told by telephone where she would find him. It was a vacant lot. There lay the body of her husband, naked. His flesh had been bruised; he had been castrated; his head was crushed by a rock. The experience drove the woman crazy.

A dramatic critic on the Frankfurter Zeitung dared criticize a pro-Hitler play by Dr. Goebels, minister of propaganda. He was taken away, confined in prison, and his back was lacerated by beating with a length of cable. Another newspaper worker who failed to print a propaganda article had his head shaved and the hair stuffed down his throat. Jews who had signed documents claiming there was no persecution of their sect in Germany confessed to the Neuberger that they did so under compulsion and fear. Neuberger said he witnessed Catholic altar boys going to mass set upon by storm troopers and their robes torn from them and trampled in the mud.

Hitler has proceeded against Jews, Catholics and other groups which might be non-conformist. His minister of propaganda, Goebels, is a brilliant man, but cruel and bitter.

"There is no intellectual liberty in Germany. There is no freedom of the press. Editors are cowed, afraid to speak out," said Neuberger. "But many Germans assert they do not support the new government. They are compelled by fear to keep silent."

Nazi propaganda is being spread here, the speaker declared. Neuberger is continuing a law course at the university.
