

Dizzy Football Scramble to Unravel on Coast Today

OREGON CLASH TO BE HISTORIC

Stanford out to Redeem Five Losses; Oregon and Trojans Favorites

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10. (AP)—Pawns on a glass checker board, three undefeated Pacific coast conference teams will be engaged in moves tomorrow expected to unravel the dizziest football scramble of years into a two-way race for the championship.

Oregon's undefeated Webfoots meet their old time foe, Oregon State's Beavers in one of the most crucial games in the history of this traditional rivalry. Oregon State likewise lists no defeats but into its record is written a tie with Southern California. The result of this contest, barring a tie, will make or break the championship chances of one of the northern elvies.

In the south, the Trojans of Southern California, not defeated in 27 games and in their second conference title, will face an inspired Stanford squad bent on turning the tables on a team it has lost to five successive years.

While outcomes of the encounters are expected to clarify what at present is a three-way tie in the matter of games lost, unexpected endings may turn the championship chase completely topsy turvy.

Northerners Have Chance
An Oregon State victory and a defeat for Southern California would give the Beavers a claim to the title as tomorrow's game completes their conference schedule, and an Oregon win over Southern California a week later would clinch the championship for Oregon State.

On the basis of earlier performances, however, Oregon is expected to outscore Oregon State while Southern California already has been placed in the undesired role of two to one favorite over Stanford's Indians.

Pre-game forecasters have been battered from pillar to post in a season that has seen favored elvies toppled from monotonous regularity but if tomorrow's contests run according to predictions, Oregon and Southern California will decide the conference championship one week from tomorrow.

Oregon's Backfield Versatile
Strictly on form, Oregon has shown greater scoring potentialities than Oregon State. Its backfield is more versatile in halfbacks Temple and Gee and the mighty Mikulak, fullback. Oregon State's main ball carrying threat is Norman Franklin, an All-American halfback candidate on his earlier shining. Defensive football may be the main factor. Neither team has been scored upon in conference games.

Southern California rates as the favorite over Stanford, although no logical excuse has been discovered for such overwhelming odds. The Trojans as a scoring unit undoubtedly elude their opponents but defensively Stanford appears able to hold its own.

While the three league leaders are trying to maneuver into strategic positions, two other old time conference rivalries will be settled with only the winning scores at stake.

Washington comes to the stronghold of California's Bears with high hopes of turning the tables on the team that last season eked out a 7-6 victory of upset proportions. Two weeks ago Washington beat Stanford 6 to 0 and will be favored to take the measure of the Bears. Washington State is expected to have an easy time winning from Idaho.

In non-conference games, Montana meets Gonzaga; and the University of California at Los Angeles takes on the San Diego Marines. St. Mary's team stops off on the return trip from its triumphant invasion of New York and victory over Fordham to meet A. A. Stagg's College of Pacific eleven at Stockton, Calif.

GRID FAN ROLL OF HONOR IS PLANNED

An "All-Western Football Fan Honor Roll," the number of signatures to which will largely determine whether or not football broadcasts will be continued in 1934, is being brought to the attention of the public by Associated dealers in all parts of the Pacific coast region, according to L. B. Endicott, agent of Associated Oil company here.

The honor roll is in the form of a petition to be signed only by those who listen to and appreciate the broadcasts, also go to the games as often as possible and desire to have the broadcasts continued in 1934.

Accompanying the honor roll is a questionnaire designed to give definite information as to the effect of football broadcasting on stadium attendance. The questionnaire, asking whether the signer listens to football broadcasts, what games he has attended this season, how many more games he plans to attend, whether he believes football broadcasts encourage stadium attendance, etc., will provide information indicating whether or not grid broadcasting serves to encourage more travel to the games by making interest in the sport more general.

CURT COMMENTS

There's one story that has appeared annually on the sport pages in Oregon that will be omitted this year—or else we are badly fooled. It's the one about Oregon State, or maybe Oregon, threatening to drop out of the Coast conference.

Usually about this time of year the graduate managers of those institutions are moaning that their teams lack the drawing power that they might have in the home bailiwick, because they have been knocked over by the big juggernauts of the south; whereas if there was a northern conference, they would most likely be right up in the race and the "Oregon Civil War" would have more than local significance.

But now look at them—both with 1,000 rating in the big conference, and they wouldn't have near the prestige they enjoy this bright sunny morning—well, anyway this morning of their momentous duel—if they were not members of the conference. And so we will hear nothing of secession for another year, at least.

As we fans scurry around for tickets if we haven't them, for a parking place if we have, or to find somebody we can coax into giving six points, wonder how many take time to analyze the reasons why the Oregon schools happen to be up there—when a year ago they were totally out of the picture, Oregon State especially for Oregon had been beaten only by that "miracle play" of the Uelans.

Material? What new names have you noticed in the lineup of either school? Nine of Oregon State's "Iron Immortals" were on the squad last year, the tenth was a Rook and the eleventh transferred from Oregon Normal. Neither do any new stars appear on the Webfoot side of the ledger; this year's regulars were all in there a year ago. Both schools, in fact, lost men who were supposed to be All-American material and others who were outstanding.

Of course it's true that this is a "top of the wave" year for both, or appears so; Oregon will lose its three great backs along with a number of linemen; Oregon State loses more than half of the "Iron Immortals." All these men on both teams have been getting more valuable from year to year and in Oregon's case they have worked together for three years.

Then there is the coaching; Prink Callison without any doubt has profited by the things he learned last year; it took him a season to organize himself to a coaching field in which defeats must not occur, far different from the high school and freshman ball he had handled. Lon Stiner has by this time, and regardless of whether he wins or loses today, proven what we suggested before the season started: that he might; without any different material he has succeeded brilliantly where Schisler in his last year failed miserably; it's a personal triumph for Stiner who, already in the varsity swim, didn't need a year's experience to get started.

Yet all these factors do not quite explain how two Oregon elvies have done so far, what the dismal critics say they never could do; move out ahead of most of the California schools. It just seems to us that with a couple of "new deals" in which this state bowed to no one, refused to send out for help from the "big names" in other parts of the country, Oregon has thrown off its inferiority complex in the realm of football at least, seized the idea and let it permeate thoroughly that it was as good as anybody else, and then went out to prove it.

will be observed at the Middle Grove Evangelical church Sunday at 11 a. m. Mrs. J. Vinton Scott, for many years a missionary to China, has been secured to give the address and violin numbers will be given by the Scott boys.

FIVE LINN SCHOOLS JOIN HOOP LEAGUE

SCIO, Nov. 10.—At a meeting of the coaches of the smaller Linn county high schools Monday night held at Tangent, a Linn county B league for basketball was formed. Coaches from eight high schools were present.

Only five teams, Scio, Tangent, Sweet Home, Shedd, and Plainview, became members of the league. Halsey, Brownsville, and Harrisburg, did not join, chiefly because of lack of finances or inadequate playing facilities. Games will be scheduled with these teams however by teams in the league.

Both Miss Doris Neptune and Francis Keltner, Scio coaches, attended the meeting.

Scio's schedule:
January 5—Shedd at Scio.
January 12—Plainview at Scio.
January 19—Tangent at Tangent.

January 26—Open.

February 2—Sweet Home at Scio.

February 9—Shedd at Shedd.

February 16—Plainview at Plainview.

February 23—Tangent at Scio.

The last game, Scio vs. Sweet Home at Sweet Home, will be scheduled for some week night agreeable to both teams.

Basketball practices at Scio for the girls started Wednesday.

Junior High Rival Elevens Ready for Combat; To Vie Tonight at 7, Sweetland

Two thousand junior high school students can't be wrong, and therefore it may safely be said that the annual gridiron clash between Parrish and Leslie elevens, tonight at 7 o'clock on Sweetland field, is the most important event on the Armistice day calendar, and one of the biggest of the year.

Backers of the rival elevens had their inning in rallies Friday and the players will have theirs to night. For, aside from the aforementioned 2000 who will turn out almost 100 per cent, an increasing number of sport fans each year have come to recognize this annual game on Armistice day as an all-city affair. Other games played by the junior highs draw only a fair attendance, but their own "little civil war" gets the crowd.

As a feature of the American Legion's Armistice day show, the Parrish-Leslie game has always been a colorful affair. Two years ago a movement was started to line up the fans who had no direct affiliation with either school, in two rival camps based on their residence, those living in the Leslie district supporting the south end eleven and those in the Parrish district boosting the stock of the north end team. The dividing line is Trade street. The plan has come to be rather generally accepted and will be in vogue to night.

SEVERAL PROMOTED
MEHAMA, Nov. 10.—Little Gertrude Wolfkel was promoted from the fifth to the sixth grade at the same time several in the primary room were promoted. Charles Boche is working at the Crabtree mill above town, and Lee Dixon is home after being employed as blacksmith at the Silver Falls camp.

BOXING, WRESTLING CLASSES TO START

A large turnout is anticipated for the first meeting of the young men's boxing class at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday, November 16, at 7 p. m., when Clyde Grewell starts his third year as instructor with the local association. Last year 30 men were regularly enrolled in the boxing course. All those interested are urged to attend next Thursday's meeting as the schedule for the winter will be determined, the class will meet two nights a week.

Boys of junior high and high school age will have a boxing class to themselves with Grewell as instructor. Their first meeting will be held at 4 p. m. next Thursday.

Boys in the same age group interested in preparing for work on high school or Y. M. C. A. wrestling teams will get together at 5 p. m. next Wednesday for their first wrestling class of the winter with Don Hendrie in charge.

Hendrie's men's wrestling class is preparing to meet the Multnomah club team in Portland, December 13. He expects to send five men to represent the local association, but has not yet announced his choices.

A return meet will be held here at a later date.

HOOP GAME SLATED
AMITY, Nov. 10.—Boys and girls basketball has started in the Amity Union High school. Miss Gladys Burgess has charge of the girls, Oral Robbins, the boys. The first scheduled game of the season is with Rickreall, December 1, at the Amity High school gymnasium.

Beall Tutor For Golf Classes At Linfield College

Jim Beall of Salem, freshman at Linfield college, presents daily golf instruction to 50 men and women, who have enrolled in the new course. The young instructor, who served as assistant at the Ilwaco Country club in Salem before going to Linfield, plans to organize a student golf club which will promote school tournaments.

Next spring a Linfield golf team will be organized also. A four-man squad composed of Beall, Justin Woods, McMinnville; George Harrington, Medford, and Kenneth Fender, McMinnville, lost a practice match to Willamette on the Yamhill course recently. A return match in the near future is planned.

Turkey Shoot at Traps Scheduled

A turkey, ham and bacon shoot will be held at the Salem Traps, starting at 10 o'clock, it is announced. Entrants will be classified according to their known ability so that all with have an opportunity to bring home the bacon.
