chased for 55 cents and bound Hart's arms to his body. "Holmes then told me to take hold of him," said the confession. "He took hold of the upper part of Hart's body and I took hold of him from the knees down and together we lifted him on the rail of the San Mateo bridge and tossed him into the bay. As I recall he struggled slightly."

Thurmond then said they returned to San Jose, dividing the $7.50 they had taken from Hart's wallet before reaching the bridge. The statement said Thurmond went to San Francisco, put through a telephone call to the Hart home and made the demand for $40,000. The call was traced to a downtown hotel in the Bay city. The wallet, Thurmond's statement added, he threw into the bay at a point along the waterfront. It was found the next morning on the taffrail of an oil tanker, giving the appearance of having been dropped from the liner Larkine. This clue led to a fruitless search of the liner at Los Angeles.

Thurmond said he and Holmes made arrangements to negotiate with the elder Hart for the ransom and asked the merchant to put $40,000 in a satchel and drive with it toward Los Angeles. The merchant did not do so, the confession went on, and Thurmond telephoned to find out why not, Hart replying he wanted further proof of the presence of his son in the deal. A letter then was sent to the elder Hart asking him again to comply with their plans Tuesday.

Last night, according to the statement, Thurmond was telephoning Hart further directions about delivering the money in a satchel when Sheriff Emig stepped in. The sheriff had been tracing numerous telephone calls to the Hart home and jumped into action the minute the connection was made.

Preparations For Winter Relief Season Are Made By Salvation Army Here

The Salvation Army workers are busy preparing for another busy winter in Salem, rehabilitating the lives of the unfortunate and clothing and feeding the needy. Capt. Lewis McAllan, in charge of the local corps, reported Thursday.

Capt. McAllan tells of numerous incidents in which "helping hand" of the Army reached out and gave comfort to hungry stomachs and starved souls, in the past year. Numbers of men—riders of side-door pullmans—applied to the Army for meals and for a night's lodging, ex-convicts were shown how to keep from going back to the "same old life" and parents were helped in finding their lost sons and daughters.

"Going over the records of the last few months is like reading an interesting book," Captain McAllan said. "Families and men of all nationalities have applied to us for aid. Who can tell what some of these folks in moments of dire need might have done if the Army, through the help given by the people of Salem, had not come to their aid?"

"One man who had been discharged from the state prison called one morning and in the course of the interview he said: 'Captain, I know there are places where I could go to get help, but it would mean going back to the old associates and the same old life. Captain, I am through with that. I want to start life right this time and so I have come to you.'"

"Another young boy who left his home in Baltimore arrived in the city one day—down, but not out. In his dilemma he turned to the Salvation Army. We got in touch with his parents in Baltimore and now the boy is safe in his home again."

"A woman came to us one day and said she wanted to find her boy who was somewhere in Australia. What could the Army do? Through our lost and found department this mother was made happy by receiving a letter one day from her long lost boy."

"A broken-hearted father came to us a few weeks ago. His daughter of 15 had been the victim of adverse circumstances and a disappointing motherhood. Two days later she was taken into the Salvation Army's rescue home in Portland. These are just a few of the hundreds of cases that come to the Army every year. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

Executors Named—M. G. Gunderson and L. O. Ness of Silverton, were named yesterday as joint executors of the will of the late Anna Ness who left property which has an estimated value of $1960.

not immediately answered. State department aides said the records were to be removed to a downtown government building for examination by American and soviet officials. These records presumably dealt with debts and issues left unsettled since the czarist government failed.

Police patrolled the vicinity of the embassy as the records were taken out. Litvinoff gave his approval, state department aides said, to the removal.

halt from the relief lists. The county committee is now compiling a project list.

No information has been received by Boardman or the state highway commission relative to the amount of park money that will be allotted to Oregon. At the time word originally was received from Washington it was understood that Boardman, as procurement officer, would supervise the park operations in this state.

Boardman said the largest proportion of the park workers assigned to Oregon would be used in Multnomah and Marion counties.

embargo as reasons for lifting the ban on durum.

The state railroad commission has reported that nearly all warehousemen in North Dakota are unable to finance further purchases of grain until they are in a position to ship wheat to their commission firms which furnish finances to a large percentage of the warehousemen in the state.

Governor Langer proclaimed his embargo Oct. 19, declaring it was designed to increase the price of wheat and to serve notice to the nation of the "bad plight of the wheat farmer."

In Family Poisoning Trial

The sole survivor of a poisoning orgy that wiped out his father, mother and two brothers, four-year-old Clyde Colley (right) may be called to tell his story at the forthcoming trial at Benton, Ark., of Mark H. Shank (left), Akron, Ohio, attorney, who is charged with the crime. Clyde, who was poisoned with the rest of his family, recovered and told police that Shank had "put something in the grape juice" drunk by the family.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at bedtime, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for everybody. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drugstore, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

And there are plenty of articles raises have not yet come on, but are expected any time. And more raises are then expected on commodities which have already gone up in price.

Now, doesn't that look like Buy-Now is good sound economics—as long as you buy those things which are really wanted?

A merchant here remarked yesterday that dress shirts which are right now retailing for $1.98 have advanced so that the retail on new orders will be $2.50—a 55 cent boost. And a boost of $1.50 over present prices is in the cards on a certain well-known hat line.

Wholesale prices on house furnishings have gone up from 20 to 40 and 50 per cent in the last 60 days.

Better grade men's suits will cost $10 more in the spring; and lower priced suits will take a corresponding uplift in price.

that NRA actually is working—and getting results.

"Since the lumber code went into effect, 12,000 men have returned to work in the west coast industry. Employment has been spread by allocation of mill operating time and the industry as a whole is much better off than at any time since the depression started. And the workers are getting better wages. It is only the operator who is unwilling to share equitably in the burden placed on all operators that is objecting to the code."

There are 6 types of home-grown tobaccos that are best for cigarettes

BRIGHT TOBACCOS
U. S. Types 11, 12, 13, 14.

BURLEY TOBACCO
U. S. Type 31.

SOUTHERN MARYLAND TOBACCO
U. S. Type 32.

U. S. Type 11 is produced in the Piedmont Belt of Virginia and part of North Carolina.

U. S. Type 12 is produced in eastern North Carolina.

U. S. Type 13 grows in South Carolina.

U. S. Type 14 is produced mostly in southern Georgia—a few million pounds in northern Florida and Alabama.

U. S. Type 31 includes what is called White Burley tobacco. It was first produced by George Webb in 1864. It is light in color and body, and is milder than the Burley used for pipes.

U. S. Type 32, Maryland tobacco, is noted for its "burn". In this respect Maryland excels most other tobaccos.

These are the kinds of home-grown tobaccos used for making Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Then Chesterfield adds aromatic Turkish tobacco to give just the right seasoning or spice.

Chesterfield ages these tobaccos for 30 months—2½ years—to make sure that they are milder and taste better.
