Holiday Shopping Season Arrives

THANKSGIVING past, and now December! And shop windows are blossoming in red and green, the Christmas colors of poinsettias and holly. From the workshops of fairylard toys are brought forth, in their bright paint and shiny varnish, to catch the eyes of children who press their small noses against the window panes and stare in wonder at the mysteries they see.

Salem shops are dressing up for the holiday trade. They are putting on their Christmas attire of cedar wreaths and silver spangles. This week the streets will be decorated with great cedar wreaths and ropes. And in the homes many a matron is busy with "Christmas things," stitching and knitting and pasting, using deft fingers to give some personal touch to gifts to relatives and friends.

1933 Christmas will be more jaunty than for a year or two or three. There is an optimism which belies actual conditions. People are genuinely hopeful. All of this augurs a more active merchandising season that has been enjoyed for years.

A large percentage of retail business is done in the month of December. For thousands of establishments it means the difference between continuing in business another year or not. Back of the stores are factories which depend on Christmas orders for dolls and toys and gift merchandise. So normal Christmas shopping is essential in our scheme of things; and this year should be better than the sub-normal of recent years.

Salem stores are presenting seasonable and attractive stocks, fresh from leading home and foreign makers. In this edition many advertisers present their initial announcements introducing their lines to the Christmas trade.

Grocers Meeting Changed; Friday Night New Time

The meeting of Salem grocers looking toward organization of a central egg market has been changed from next Monday to Friday night, December 8, it was announced Saturday. The meeting has been called by Ed Schunke, president of the Salem Retail Grocers' association, and will be held at 8 p.m. at the chamber of commerce.

If the plan for a central storage plant is favored, such a plant will be set up shortly. A representative from the poultry department at Oregon State college will speak at the Friday meeting.

TUBERCULIN TESTS VALUES ARE CITED

Work Being Done as Result Of Christmas Seal Fund Saves Many Lives

Actual cases from the files of health units within the state of Oregon show the work being done by tuberculin tests made possible through the sale of Christmas Seals.

Following is a typical case examined and treated under the health program carried out with these funds:

The mother nursed the grandmother when a young girl, then married and had three children. The girl developed tuberculosis and died. A few years later, the mother died, leaving two children.

The children were all given tuberculin tests, with positive reactions, and were fluoroscoped at the tuberculosis sanatorium. The older child was given a clean bill of health and instructions in regard to diet, and personal hygiene, as well as annual examination.

An x-ray was advised for the younger child, which was taken and showed no active tuberculosis, but the doctor felt it was a potential case and should have extra care, food and rest, so the child has been taken to the country by friends. He has gained 10 pounds in the last four months, and is studying and keeping up with his class. He will enter school next semester for half day only, and will carry on the same regimen regarding care.
