Pension Act May Be Given Test In Marion Court

The Fraternal Order of Eagles may provide funds necessary for mandamus proceedings against the Marion county court, with the view of forcing a tax levy to pay old-age pensions here in 1934 and also with the purpose of testing the court's rulings on certain mooted provisions of the 1933 pension act. The Eagles for years have been active in a national campaign for old-age pensions. There is moot point in the law which has been the subject of much discussion. This question involving how far a county court may go in exercising its discretion as to amounts that shall be paid out for pensions. Several legislators advised members of the Marion county court that the monthly allowance could be reduced to five cents or less, provided such action was necessary to operate the act. The law provides a maximum monthly pension of $30 but no reference is made to the minimum amount that may be paid. Other legislators took the position that the courts shall pay a reasonable pension, based on the actual record in each case.

The main event was a wrestling match between Sailor Thomas and Lindon Jones. It was a half-hour bout or two out of three falls. Thomas won the first fall in 15 minutes and 10 seconds. Jones took the second fall in eight minutes. The whistle blew which ended the match before either of the wrestlers could get another fall, making it a draw.

TRANSIENTS SAID TO REALLY WANT WORK

(Continued from page 1) ters comfortable and agreeable for the men. Cleanliness is a watchword; vermin has been virtually exterminated. A transient barber has set up shop in one corner of the big hall and gives haircuts free if the "customer" is "broke." Boardman has installed a medicine chest in his "hotel" office to treat ailing "patrons." Cases demanding special attention are sent to local physicians.

The transient men, who are permitted to remain one night and receive three meals, are finding great enjoyment out of magazines donated by Salem residents. Still more magazines are needed, Boardman stated. More nearly adequate heating is now provided by an oil drum stove contributed by a local organization.

"These men may talk loud and long about communism and so forth when they come," Boardman said, "but when they've had a good meal and have a warm place to stay, they usually go to sleep or at least quiet down." One of the "hotel" cooks stays on duty till 11 o'clock each night to pass out meat sandwiches and coffee to the transient men who come from the late freight trains.

The daily menu is a generous one, today's for instance: Breakfast — oatmeal with milk, apple sauce, bread and coffee; dinner — roast veal, mashed potatoes, creamed carrots, blackberries, bread and coffee.

Provisions for Hotel de Minto are still being contributed, as in the past, by Salem merchants and private citizens. The federal agency does the supervising, interviewing and other work aimed at getting transient men into permanent locations.

SEATTLE POLICE CATCH KIDNAPER

(Continued from page 1) The suspect was then arrested and confessed within 12 hours after he had made his inquiries near the school.

Both young von Herberg and his father, the operator of a chain of theatres, were informed of the plot as soon as police learned of it, May said, and were kept in touch with developments. Officers at the conference with May tonight, including C. C. Spears, chief of the bureau of investigating here of the department of justice, W. K. Bowling and R. C. Everstein, department of justice agents, and Snohomish county officers, closely guarded their movements after leaving his office.

It was believed they were heading for the hiding place of accomplices of the man under arrest. Before leaving Spears declared that the plot was the "first of major proportions frustrated in the United States," and the third attempted kidnaping frustrated here in recent months.

With the arrest, May said, it was learned that the kidnap gang made its headquarters in a house on the outskirts of Everett. One of two out of three falls. Thomas won the first fall in 15 minutes and 10 seconds. Jones took the second fall in eight minutes. The whistle blew which ended the match before either of the wrestlers could get another fall, making it a draw.

For the first time since it was originally offered five years ago the song trophy, awarded annually by Lena Belle Tartar, head of the high school music department, has been won by a first-year class at Salem high. When sophomores won the inter-class song contest yesterday they not only accomplished a new feat for themselves but also refused the seniors what they have come to believe an almost traditional prerogative, for the silver loving cup has been passed from senior class to senior class without a break in the succession.

Words of the winning sophomore song written to "Marching Along" are by Jean Doege, who as class song-leader also directed the presentation. Songs and yells were judged together; juniors took second place leaving the seniors to bring up the rear.

While there was little or no discussion as to the awarding of first place to sophomores it was understood about school yesterday that judges were not all satisfied with the system which fixed the other two places. Student representatives were of the opinion that another year songs and yells will not only be judged separately but places in the two events will be awarded separately.

STORMY WEATHER REACHES ENGLAND

(Continued from page 1) At Cleveland three persons were drowned, their automobiles plunging into the Cuyahoga river. SEATTLE, Dec. 13. (P) — An river went back into its channels and inundated lowlands slowly drained, plans were made today for aggressive action in demanding future protection from high waters in western Washington.

Although additional a m a g e was reported and continued rain was a forecast, mountain stream flow had dropped greatly, almost all main roads were again open, and both rail and auto traffic schedules were back to normal.

The toll taken by the flood and storm was tentatively raised to ten today, when John P. Murray, 46, former manager of the Gray Hotel in a Dallemans' association, was reported missing from his ranch near Montesano.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13. (P) — Drenching coast and valleys, winter swept over California today to storm the granite peaks of the Sierran mountains with whirling snow. Wet Basements Blamed on Dam In Mill Creek Overflow of basements along Mill creek near Church street, of which City Engineer Hugh Rogers has received numerous complaints, is caused by a dam owned by W. C. Winslow, Rogers said yesterday. The dam is situated just below Church street and backs up the water as far east as Summer street.

Repeated efforts to get city attorneys in the past to take legal action to have the dam removed have been fruitless, Rogers asserted. The dam was put in a good many years ago to divert water into a ditch extending along Division street. This ditch was filled up 10 years ago but the dam left standing.

State Gets Share Of Timber Fund

Let's Put the Cards on the Table!!

"NOW IS THE TIME TO BE CONVINCED"

From the standpoint of importance I know selling merchandise does not compare with the vital services of a doctor, saving the lives of the injured and stricken, or that of a policeman, courageously facing the flash of a bandit's gun, or of a fireman heroically disappearing into the flaming jaws of death to rescue some trapped and suffocating soul.

Yet selling men's work clothing is a service that can definitely help or hinder you in fighting your way back to a smile, to peace, to safety in today's struggle for existence.

In today's swirling battle to make every penny buy its utmost, greed can add many dark, hopeless moments to that struggle. Spoiled eggs paid for at the price at which you were told you would receive only those strictly fresh, is an act born of utmost greed. A counterfeit dollar bill received in change from a perfectly good hard-earned ten-spot; that's more of the same thing—Greed. It is hard sometimes to tell where greed ends and thievery begins.

The new NRA retail code is a great step forward in protecting you. First, the new code forbids deceiving the customer. Second, it forbids all false claims and false advertising.

But it is our opinion that a vital regulation should further be embodied in the code and we recommend it for consideration. Namely, the margin of profit on any article sold at retail should be limited within some definite fair figure.

It is a source of satisfaction to know that the principles of the retail code have been carried out by this store since it first opened its doors. I will continue to do so, plus the further principle of small profit.

The profit I add to the cost of a garment is so small that the price you pay averages me less than an operating net profit of 8%. And that is a profit, or lack of profit ever claimed by any merchant in America, up to 1933, has been willing to accept as a reward for serving you.

I take this small profit and get a great kick out of it. I make a happy living for my family on your less than 8 per cent profit and I am grateful for it. And if my way of doing business takes the greed angle out of the solution of some of your worries, I will consider I have made more than enough friends to make up for the difference I lose by my low prices.
