Brass Family Examined In Orchestra Series

By MARGARET LEE MAASKE

THE brass family is the loudest section of the symphony orchestra. Its four members are like a quartet of soprano, alto, tenor and bass voices. The instruments are made of metal, not always brass colored, and are blown upon to pro- Eloise Wright and hostess, Mrs. ter, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. C. W.

martial, warlike music. The alto voice-the solemn, pathetic, or romantic French horn, is a difficult instrument to play. It is identified by its many feet of tubing, all coiled around and around into various shaped curlicues. The person who plays the slide trombone, the noble tenor voiced instrument of the brass family, must have a perfect ear to slide the long tubes of the instrument to the correct places for the notes, detected only by the ear. If he slides them too far, or not quite far enough, he would create great discord in the music. Lastly, the dignified and powerful toned tuba is the bass instrument of the brass quartet. To see and Mrs. Jesse (Fay) Traver and what it looks like, watch for the largest metal horn in the next con- Mrs. A. P. (Ada) Ireland and cert of the Salem Philharmonic or-

Two Anniversaries To Be Feted

Fifty years ago the following article appeared in the Abiline Chronicle: "Of course we expect Kansas to lead the world. Other states do their best and then Kansas goes several better. That is what Kansas is for. We read of double weddings in other places. but in our banner county, we can report five weddings in one day in one house, and it was a very cold day, too. If we had had our usually bright sunny weather, we don't know where the end would have been, for our stock of old bachelors is still large and varied, and during the next 12 months will be closed out for less than cost. The pleasant ceremonies were performed by the Rev. F. S. Allman at the residence of
