WALLULAH CONTRACT IS KEPT IN SALEM

Distinctive Book Planned by Willamette Students; Businessmen Approve

David Moser, business manager, and Lowell Eddy, editor, of the Wallulah, Willamette university year-book, announced yesterday that they had placed the contract for the 1934 book with The Statesman Publishing company of Salem. A book of unusual distinction is planned for the year, and department editors are already at work compiling material. Last year the book was printed in Portland, but this year satisfactory arrangements were made with the local printers to handle the job. In the fall Moser and Eddy met with Salem business interests who were anxious to have the work done locally, and assured them they would make every effort to place the job in Salem, and the announcement yesterday is taken by local merchants as a very gratifying carrying out of that assurance.

Meeting with the manager and editor yesterday representatives of the chamber of commerce and the business men's league voted full endorsement of the community support for the annual and other university publications. "We are very happy," said Howard Hulsey, president of the business men's league, "that the Wallulah managers are placing the work with Salem printers and want to pledge our hearty support for the book in the way of local advertising. Salem needs the university and the university needs Salem, and by cooperation a great deal can be accomplished for our mutual good."

The business men's league has issued a letter to Salem firms endorsing the Wallulah and other Willamette university publications, and inviting business and professional men to cooperate with them. The manager will complete his solicitation of the advertising and the book will be in production during the spring months.

FORECLOSED NOTE NOT COLLECTIBLE

Notes for payment on real property are not collectible following recovery of the property by original owner upon mortgage foreclosure, the Oregon supreme court held Tuesday in an opinion reversing the Klamath county circuit court in the case of Ethel Gray against J. A. Mitchell and Spicy E. Mitchell, appellants.

The plaintiff was upheld in the lower court in an action to recover a $500 note from defendants. Defendants admitted execution of the note at the time they entered into a contract for purchase of property for $4700 on installments. Failure to keep up the payments resulted in plaintiff's foreclosure.

title recovering property on the mortgage agreement.
Justice Harry Belt, in his opinion reversing Judge W. M. Duncan stated, "It would be manifestly unjust to plaintiff to rescind the contract by recovering possession of the property under the forfeiture clause, retain the installments paid by the vendee, and recover the balance due on the purchase price." Neither party will recover costs, he held.

In another opinion the court upheld the Multnomah circuit court in granting a judgment to Clarence E. Bly as the result of personal injuries received in an automobile collision. The Moores Motor company was named defendant in the action and appealed to the supreme court. The opinion by Justice J. O. Bailey upheld the decree of Judge James P. Stapleton.

It means something

..that Chesterfield has a modern up-to-date Tobacco Factory in far-off historic Smyrna

So important is the handling of Turkish tobacco in making Chesterfield cigarettes that Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., maintains this specially equipped plant right in the heart of the famous Smyrna tobacco section. It is the largest and most modern tobacco factory in the Near East.

Turkish tobacco, you know, is the best "seasoning" there is for cigarettes. At all times Chesterfield has in storage—at this plant and in America—about 350,000 bales of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco.
