EDMUND LOWE

How much thought do you give to your child's eyesight?

Your child's usefulness, happiness and success in life is dependent largely upon... the watchfulness you keep over it and the intelligence with which you guide it.

A child forms its habits from what it sees... and the habits become a permanent part of its whole life. The eye is the mirror of the brain. If a child sees clearly he or she will think clearly. But... if vision is defective... thoughts and opinions expressed will be distorted.

In justice to the growing child... parents should have their children's eyes scientifically examined ONCE EACH YEAR—for we know now that early eyesight neglect causes much of the eyeglass wearing in adult life.

Study with many children comes with the greatest effort, and is often attended with headaches and eyestrain. Our specialists have prescribed "schoolwork glasses" for hundreds of children where the improvement in school progress became almost immediately apparent.
