

COUNCILMEN TALK LIQUOR

But Reach No Decision Pending Supreme Court Decision on Law

SILVERTON, Feb. 6.—The "liquor" question and the CWA divided honors in discussion before the city council at its February meeting held Monday night. Indications were that a special meeting to deal with the former would be held within the near future. Lack of knowledge as to how the matter should be handled prevented definite action Monday night.

An application for a recommendation from the city council to the liquor control commission was asked by George P. Manolis in a communication read. Mr. Manolis expressed desire to handle beer and wines of no greater alcoholic content than 14 per cent. Council members expressed themselves favorable toward Mr. Manolis but took no action pending further information.

Steelhammer Approved
A request for the approval of George W. Steelhammer, druggist, as manager of the Silverton sub-station for the liquor control commission, was granted by the council. It was explained that Mr. Steelhammer would handle the "hard" liquor locally for the commission but would not be permitted to display it in windows or prominent locations within the store.

The drawing up of an ordinance "with teeth in it" for the handling of the local liquor question was suggested as soon as the present situation is "settled by the supreme court." This will likely be brought up at the special council meeting.

A communication from Glenn Niles, civil works administrator, was read and gave the information that the federal administration would not for the present resume responsibility for any more material used in the CWA program.

CWA Projects End
The announcement was made that the CWA program here was completed Monday noon and the street committee of the council was instructed to have a detailed report of work done at Silverton made a once. R. E. Winslow, who has been the engineer during the CWA program here, was suggested as the one to make out the report.
