Frost-Bitten Ears W in Students Holiday

The coldest day ever recorded by New York's Weather Bureau in its 64 years of existence, when the mercury dipped to more than 14 degrees below zero, brought grief to the ears of these students at a Brooklyn high school. Some 200 students were treated for frostbite, mostly on the ears, but also on a few noses. Here are some of the patients being treated by physicians before being given a day off from their studies.

8,000; the lighthouse commission from 537 to 250; the fisheries commission from 2,349 to 650; the coast guard from 717 to 360; the veterans administration from 849 to 150 and the bureau of mines 446 to 223.

In addition the coast and geologic survey of the department of commerce must discontinue its supplementary control survey employing around 15,030 men.

These orders would cover a total of 263,582 men, but it was said at the civil works administration that in some instances federal projects would be continued and some of the men kept in employment.

500,000 Work Now on Federal Projects
The civil works administration originally planned to allot 1,000,000 men to federal projects but found it necessary to reduce this number to 500,000. Commitments were made for the period ending February 15 and some of the projects have been completed.

Congressional action on the $950,000,000 appropriation bill was completed when the senate passed it last night. The bill provides for the construction of state civil works and relief administration to be confirmed by it and a motion to reconsider previous action in approving a partial conference report was defeated.

In an interview given before he went to New York today, Hopkins said he believed that "unemployment insurance, plus some schedule of work support insurance, is much better than relief."

Glenn C. Niles, CWA administrator, was uninformed officially last night regarding the continuation of civil works projects in Marion county, he said. Early this week he advised CWA crews to report on their jobs when the regular new shift would begin, in case orders are had by that time to proceed with the work.

FLAX NOT HARD ON SOIL AVERS HYSLOP

Growing flax is not "hard on the land" as the assurance given by George R. Hyslop, farm crops specialist at the state college, in a talk before the Rotary club yesterday. "It is no harder than growing wheat or oats or barley. It was flax wilt which cut down production in northwestern states rather than soil exhaustion which gave flax the bad reputation of being hard on land," Hyslop said.

Despite the vicissitudes of past experiments with flax growing in the valley, Hyslop declared it is practical, though he said additional tariff protection was needed. It must be made a free industry, outside of the state prison and processing plants should be located carefully. It is also necessary to separate fiber flax growing from seed flax as the problems are different.

Best Soils Surveyed
The best soils in the valley for fiber flax are the Chagall series, second bottom lands of which there are 218,715 acres in the valley. Next rank the Willamette series with 351,680 acres. Close to the Willamette series is the better grade soils of the Amity series with 277,568 acres, showing a great area of land suitable for growing fiber flax. The essential thing, Hyslop declared, is a soil which can be worked early because fiber flax requires early planting.

The state college introduced JWS seed which has proven a success and now has strains better than JWS. "Oregon seed is equal to or superior to foreign seed," he said.

AIRWAY PIE CUT IN SECRET, CLAIM

tion in which the air routes allegedly were divided up. Many Lines Said to Have Been Ignored.

At the time the Watres act, the air mail subsidy law, was passed in 1930, Farley said, there were many reasonably well established air transport passenger lines desirous of obtaining air mail contracts, which received no consideration whatever.

In addition to the charge that the combination of companies to procure arbitrarily routes by Farley also called "illegal" the extension of five contracts beyond their normal date of expiration. These extensions to expiration date, he said, were made by an order issued by the former second assistant postmaster general, W. Irving Glover.

"There was," Farley wrote, "no attempt whatever to readvertise said routes or to reward them, or emergency requiring them to be let without competitive bidding and the course pursued was a part of the conspiracy hereinafter mentioned."

Extension of Lines
Explained by Farley. "Extension of these contracts for a period of ten years, under the so-called 'certificate' method, were arbitrarily made by Postmaster General Brown on May 3, 1930. Then Postmaster General Brown proceeded to build up, under the so-called 'extensions' of routes, part of the system of the United Aircraft and Transport corporation, and the greater part of the American Airways and the Transcontinental and Western Air systems. This means, in simple terms, that if one of these companies had a contract for part of a through route, a transcontinental system could be built on that short line. These great systems were built in that manner."

Farley declared that "Indeed, certain air transport operators who had not been invited to attend the meeting at which the agreement for dividing up the routes was reached 'were refused admission when they attempted to gain entrance.'"

Some of the meetings held in May and June of 1930, Farley said, occurred in the postoffice apartment and were attended by Brown and Glover, William P. McCracken, sentenced tonight to ten days in jail for contempt of the senate, was said by Farley to have been named chairman of the meetings.

CITY MANAGER PLAN FORMING

Mayor, Six Aldermen to Be Elected; Manager Would Be Council Picked

for payment of per diem salaries to the aldermen and mayor, safeguarded by limitation of the number of meetings that may be held in any one month. The amount of the per diem would be specified for the first council serving under the new plan but thereafter per diem pay would be set by the council for succeeding councils.

Salaries of the manager and other officials would be fixed by ordinance. At present managers in cities approximating the size of Salem receive from $3000 to $4000 annually, the committee reported.

Four-Year Terms Set

For Mayor and Aldermen
Four-year terms are provided for the mayor and aldermen, after the first election. If and when the proposed plan is approved by the voters, three aldermen would be elected for two year terms, the mayor and three aldermen for four years, thus causing three aldermen terms to expire biennially. The proposed amendment will provide that elective positions filled at the time the measure is voted on, will become vacant if the amendment carries.

The tentative draft eliminates primary city elections unless more than two candidates file for an office; elections are to continue to be non-partisan.

"Various local groups, such as organized labor, will be given hearings by the managerial plan committee before the final draft is submitted to the city council," Alderman V. E. Kuhn, chairman, stated. "The committee wants its final proposal to conform to conditions that exist in Salem and will receive suggestions along such lines."

These hearings probably will start soon after the meeting next Monday night. The committee plans to introduce the ordinance calling for a special charter amending election, May 18, at the March 5 council meeting.

Members of the committee are Aldermen Kuhn, Watson Townsend and Walter Fuhrer.

McNeely Takes On "Sacs," Banks Pass on Transfer

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14. (AP)—Earl McNeely, a Sacramento boy who made good in his own hometown, today became owner of the Sacramento baseball club.

He purchased the property just 24 hours after a San Francisco bank and two Sacramento banks had taken it over from Lewis Moring, owner for 14 years, after of approximately $150,000. The deal was completed here. McNeely, in his own words, "wouldn't speak above $150,000 cash above a whisper," but he convinced the bankers he "could and would pay off in installments." They took him at his own word. As a result he owns what is considered a real money-making club, purchased by a small down payment.

When the Salem Isaac Walton league receives its charter, the 15th chapter of that national organization for the conservation of game and fish and the preservation of wild life will be active in Oregon, John B. Ebinger of Tillamook, president of the Oregon association, told more than 50 members of Salem's neophyte league Wednesday night at the chamber of commerce. The nation has 5000 chapters of the league, he said, in telling of the work carried on in various parts of the country by lovers of the outdoors.

William A. Davidson of Portland, secretary for the league in Oregon, Dr. P. A. Loar, Rex Albright and Fred Overland of the Silverton league also spoke as did Ira Gabrielson, regional supervisor for the biological survey of the Pacific northwest and charter member of the Oregon league.

roofs of adjacent houses. Small knots of men and women, clustered in pathetic, solemn groups here and there through the shell-torn area, discussed the arrest of 2000 socialists, imprisoned for their civil war against a "fascist government threat."

In upper Austria, the situation was tense. Security Director Hammerstein, at Linz, demanded that socialists surrender arms and ammunition within 24 hours.

Dolffuss and other government leaders claimed the uprising had been broken and said subsequent operations by troops were a "mopping up" campaign.

In Styria socialists used incendiary bombs to fire buildings at nightfall.

American and German diplomatic circles, meanwhile, kept in close touch with developments and made every effort to obtain first hand information.

UNION OIL CLAIM DROPPED BY JUDGE

Judge L. H. McMahan Wednesday afternoon dismissed the circuit court case of Union Oil company against R. S. Ratcliffe following motion of defendant for a non-suit decree. The defense motion came suddenly after an hour had been spent in arguing over various points in the case and taking of testimony. The plaintiff had filed a replevin action to gain possession of certain service station equipment or $504 as its value and $200 for its detention.

In another suit, brought by Ratcliffe and taken to federal court, Ratcliffe is asking $120 damages from the oil company for alleged delay in installing equipment, $480.45 allegedly due on a contract for payment of four cents a gallon on gasoline, and $600 damages because Ratcliffe charges the oil company took gasoline from the premises at 12th and Mission street unlawfully, dug a deep hole on the premises, and prevented operation of the station for a time.
