29 Bales Sell This Week at 26c; Oregon Carryover 26,700 Bales, Word

The slight flurry in the Oregon hop market portends no advance in price, judging from the price situation in the past two weeks. So far this week only 29 bales have been reported sold, these at 26 cents from Tom Relling at Silverton to Horst.

Last week, 561 bales were sold at prices running about a cent under the prices which prevailed the previous week. The 561 total brought: 24 bales of babies at 20 cents; 171 bales at 24 cents; 153 bales at 26 cents, 213 bales at the top figure of the week, 28 cents. Sales last week were about double those of the previous week.

Growers are reported more willing to let loose their remaining hops now, due in part to need for cash on the spring cultivation and upkeep of the yards, and possibly due also to the fact that the demand from buyers is a bit more brisk than it has been for some time.

Growers who still have 1933 and earlier hops on hand are likely also taking into consideration the fact that the holdover in grower hands now is 10,000 more bales than at this time last year. Yesterday, Oregon's carryover stood at 26,700 bales. California and Washington have a similar situation on carryover.

In view of this heavy holdover, there is some prediction that the market will have no chance to go higher than it now is. Added weight is the fact of many new yards coming into production next year and the year following.

Spring contracting on clusters has not opened up at all, and on the fuggles only a small amount of business has been done recently.

29 Bales Sell This Week at 26c; Oregon Carryover 26,700 Bales, Word

The slight flurry in the Oregon hop market portends no advance in price, judging from the price situation in the past two weeks. So far this week only 29 bales have been reported sold, these at 26 cents from Tom Relling at Silverton to Horst.

Last week, 561 bales were sold at prices running about a cent under the prices which prevailed the previous week. The 561 total brought: 24 bales of babies at 20 cents; 171 bales at 24 cents; 153 bales at 26 cents, 213 bales at the top figure of the week, 28 cents. Sales last week were about double those of the previous week.

Growers are reported more willing to let loose their remaining hops now, due in part to need for cash on the spring cultivation and upkeep of the yards, and possibly due also to the fact that the demand from buyers is a bit more brisk than it has been for some time.

Growers who still have 1933 and earlier hops on hand are likely also taking into consideration the fact that the holdover in grower hands now is 10,000 more bales than at this time last year. Yesterday, Oregon's carryover stood at 26,700 bales. California and Washington have a similar situation on carryover.

In view of this heavy holdover, there is some prediction that the market will have no chance to go higher than it now is. Added weight is the fact of many new yards coming into production next year and the year following.

Spring contracting on clusters has not opened up at all, and on the fuggles only a small amount of business has been done recently.
