AUTHORITY TO SELL BANK ASSETS GIVEN

Orders Assist Liquidation of Woodburn, Stayton Institutions

Numerous court orders, assisting A. A. Schramm in the liquidation of the closed Woodburn and Stayton state banks, were handed down here yesterday.

Blanket authority was given Schramm to exchange slow assets of each bank for HOLC bonds. The latter are to be sold at the most favorable market price and the cash obtained from the sales, used to pay depositors' claims.

Orders were also signed enabling the bank superintendent to receive 1½ per cent interest reduction on loans owed by the two banks to the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The lower rate will be effective as of November 1, 1933. Provision is made in the agreement that no salaries can be increased without consent of RFC.

The court authorized Schramm to take $1550 in HOLC bonds to satisfy a $1700 note of Frank and Mary Zumstein to the Bank of Woodburn. Sale of a $100 par value share of Ray-Maling stock for $60 was authorized. The Woodburn bank liquidator was authorized to sell a City of Stayton bond for 94 cents on the dollar. The bond matures in 1942 and bears 6 per cent interest.

The liquidator was authorized to accept $1450 in federal land bank bonds in lieu of a $1450 note owed the Woodburn bank by Albert M. and Sarah C. VanCleave.

In the case of the Aurora State bank, in liquidation, the banking department was authorized to take a quit claim deed to certain property mortgage to secure a $1600 note owed by E. B. Lowe.

and cooperate with all other agencies of government concerned".

The labor secretary's assignment became immediately active when the steel operators put in her hands a counter proposal to that of the Amalgamated and a substitute for previous proposal by them.

While the operators' new proposal was understood to have been closer to the ideals of the steel workers, including deletion of language construed by labor as perpetuating company unions, there was reported to have been retained a provision calling for proportional representation of workers after a union election. The workers favored a majority representation.

Some Himalaya berries will be ready within a week or so.

The Reid Murdoch plant finished its cherry run Monday of this week, but is still canning raspberries and some logans. The night crew continues running through raspberry preserves and some sour cherries are also being handled. The sour cherry market this year is around 2½ cents per pound. Royal Annes, at five cents, carried the best figure in the cherry realm this season; blacks generally were four cents.

Honey is Found in Butteville's Old School Flue

More than 100 pounds of honey was taken from the chimney of the old Butteville school building which is being torn down to make room for a fine new structure.

A report of the find was received yesterday by Mrs. Mary L. Fulkerson, county school superintendent. Workmen may have scratched their heads a bit about the rightful division of the honey, but the county school head isn't worrying about that. All she opines is that her office just about naturally entitles her to a bit of it.

A swarm of bees was found in the chimney. The honey comb was nearly six feet long.

MISS RICKMAN HELD ARTIST OF PROMISE

Personality as Well as Her Voice Pleases; Songs by Schubert Liked

By JESSIE STEELE

A young artist of great promise, with poise, charm and personality in addition to a clear soprano voice, is Bernice Rickman who appeared in vocal recital Tuesday night at Waller hall. Lena Belle Tartar has been her teacher for the past five years.

The first half of Miss Rickman's program was given over to German selections. A group of four by Schubert contained the well-beloved "My Sweet Repose," which received a storm of applause. The artist put her heart into this song as she did in all her interpretations.

The aria from "Dinorah" by Meyerbeer, in Italian, was too ambitious for the soloist's young voice and there was evidence of strain. However, she attacked the difficult passages with confidence that won the admiration of her audience.

The final group, all in English, displayed to fullest advantage Miss Rickman's lovely low tones. Particularly was this true in "The Night Wind" by Farley, a mysterious, wailing piece which was perfectly atuned to the rich quality of the singer's voice. "A Memory," by Ganz, delicate as a spray of pressed lavender, was interpreted with finesse and understanding that would do credit to a professional artist.

As an encore, Miss Rickman sang "Less Than The Cloud," by McGill, a tender love ballad admirably suited to the sincere shading which the soloist gave it.

PROGRESS REPORTED BY QUARANTINE MEN

Discussion of pest and quarantine conditions in the 11 western states, old Mexico, British Columbia and Hawaii, featured yesterday's sessions of the 16th annual conference of the western plant quarantine board. The convention will continue until Thursday night.

The address of welcome was given by Mayor Douglas McKay, followed by the rollcall and introduction of visitors. The program also included the report of the secretary, reading of the minutes of the Salt Lake convention, and submission of special topics for committee consideration. The purpose of the convention is to study plant quarantine problems and recommend uniform legislation for the several states and countries represented.

The reports at the sessions showed that much progress has been made in stamping out plant pests and diseases. This was said to have been due largely to quarantine regulations and the cooperation of the quarantine officers of the various states and countries. An executive committee meeting was held last night.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO MRS. DANCY'S WORK

Impressive funeral services for the late Mrs. W. H. Dancy were held at Clough-Barrick parlors Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. W. C. Kantner paid a high tribute to Mrs. Dancy, making particular mention of her work in the Red Cross during the war, on the advisory board of the girls' training school, and on the hospital auxiliary where she served for many years. Miss Mary Schultz, violinist, played "Andante Cantabile" by Tchaikowsky and "Goin' Home" Largo from Dvorak's "New World Symphony." She was accompanied on the organ by Mrs. W. H. East.

A fitting token of Mrs. Dancy's great love for flowers was the large array of floral tributes. Behind the casket was a wall of gladioli and near by was a great arch of roses, lilies and other flowers.

Pallbearers were Leif Bergsvik, E. L. Baker, Breyman Boise, Dr. H. H. Olinger, Chandler Brown, William McGilchrist. Interment was in Mt. Crest abbey.

Gatke Explains Removal of Jason Lee From Mission

Jason Lee, who came to the Willamette valley in 1834 to found the Methodist mission that became Willamette university, was misunderstood by later missionaries and made to suffer therefore, declared Robert M. Gatke, professor of political science at Willamette university, at the Kiwanis club luncheon Tuesday.

Unfavorable reports of Lee's work made to the mission board of trustees in the middle west by these later missionaries resulted in Lee's removal. At the time of his death, in 1845, a year after he left the mission here, Lee was preparing to resume his work in this valley as a subordinate, Professor Gatke said.

FOURTH CAR PACKED BY CHERRY GROWERS

Pickup in Market Conditions Anticipated; Lamberta Cherries Not in Yet

The Salem Cherry Growers association was yesterday packing its fourth car of fresh fruit for shipment east and expected to continue operations this week, at least, and possibly next. Even ripening of Lamberts is holding up shipments somewhat.

Market conditions are not as rosy as earlier in the season, but a pickup is anticipated late this week, as all other cherries are now off the market, both from Washington shipping points and other Oregon shipping centers, and also from other Salem shippers.

Roy Hurst, who has been shipping some black cherries east from the Terminal Ice and Cold storage company, closed his deal this week.

Cherries from the huge 215-acre Lamberta orchards are not yet coming into the association warehouse because of late ripening. It is expected three or four carloads will be taken from this orchard.

The Royal Anne cherry deal for the canneries is virtually closed, and canning of black cherries is being finished up this week. The coast barrelled pack of Royal Annes will run about 30,000 barrels this year, or about one-third of last year, it is now estimated.
