MILLER WILL BE 77 SUNDAY

Early Days When Log Hauling Was on Boom Recalled

STAYTON, Oct. 12.—Sunday, October 14, J. R. Miller, who is "Uncle Joe" to all who know him and one of the few remaining early residents of Stayton, will celebrate his 77th birthday. He is the son of William T. and Elizabeth Hunsaker Miller, who crossed the plains with their parents in 1847.

William Miller settled about 12 miles south of Salem and here J. R. was born. He attended school at Looney Butte. When he was 21 years of age he attended McMinnville college. He stayed at the farm until he was 23 and in 1881 was united in marriage to Mattie Thomas, the daughter of Charles W. and Mary Thomas, who took an active part in the building of Stayton. They came here in 1868.

In those days to cross the Salem ditch, which had been dug in 1857 one crossed a foot log, and if you wanted to ford the stream with a team it was necessary to do this at the place where the bridge now is near the home of E. Roy.

After his marriage Mr. Miller farmed until 1885, near Turner. For a year he logged for Charles Thomas and hauled the logs to the Lee Brown sawmill here. In 1886 he and his wife moved into th house where Miss Susie Kearns now lives, and in the fall of that year built a new home, where Mrs. Anna Thayer now lives.

In 1886-87-88 and 89, Mr. Miller hauled logs to the Brown mill. The mill was a busy place in those days. Some days there would be 35 or 40 wagons loaded with lumber ready to go out for somebody's new home or other building.

About 1887, W. H. Hobson, Lee Brown (Stayton's first mayor) Uriah Whitney, Tom Simms and John Shaw, all active in early affairs of the Santiam valley, decided to form a partnership and build a mill at Mill City.

Mr. Miller hauled the lumber from Brown's sawmill here to Mill City to build the first ferry. He also hauled lumber to build the mill. He and his horses were in great demand in various parts of the county when ferry poles or large smoke stacks were to be raised as they were able to handle the job well.

After a time he gave up his job with the sawmill and was interested in a harness shop here with E. C. Baker. In 1895 he and W. E. Thomas purchased from Savage brothers the chair factory here. Nothing but rawhide bottom chairs were made and there was a big demand for them. Some of the men were able to put seats in 42 chairs in an hour. Miller later bought Thomas' interest in the factory, Thomas going into the undertaking business, and after a time sold the factory to Willis and Dennis Caldwell.

Mrs. Miller died in 1898. The Millers had one daughter, Carrie, now Mrs. Lura A. Thomas, of Salem. Mr. Miller has followed the carpenter trade more or less during the later years until in 1920, following a severe attack of flue, he was obliged to give up active labor.

In 1919 he was carpenter for one of the large mills at Astoria. In 1927, on February 2, he was united in marriage to Emma Thomas, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas, and a sister of his first wife. She passed away about 2 years ago. He and his wife had been members of the Baptist church for many years, Mr. Miller for 58 years. While his health was good he served as superintendent of the Sunday school, choir leader and took an active part in church work.

Since he has been obliged to give up active work he has devoted his time to gardening and especially delights in raising flowers. One of the most interesting flowers he found in his garden this summer, is a zinnia, which has three distinct and well formed centers. He hopes to keep the seed from this to experiment with.
