Case Remanded—A certified copy of the order remanding the Wasco Ware-house company's case against the O. R. R. & N. railroad and others was filed this week in circuit court here. The suit comes back to trial in circuit court after Judge Alger Fee of the federal bench had ruled that the proper jurisdiction was in the court where the suit originated. Claims for overcharges involved $200,000 are involved in the suit. When testimony was taken in the case before the utilities commissioner, three months were needed to complete the record. The utilities commissioner sustained the plaintiff who now sues to collect moneys allegedly due.

PROGRESS IS MADE ON RENOVIZING JOB

Enlargement of Sleeping Quarters Completed in Past Week

Steady progress, despite intermittent rains, is being made on the Marion County Housing committee's renovated house on the courthouse lawn. This coming week will see plumbers and electricians at work putting in the interior connections for that phase of the house construction. William H. Pettit, foreman in charge, said that he planned to finish the house this week. In the three days worked the past week, carpenters have completed the enlargement to the bedroom half of the house and have extended the roof down to meet the extensions placed in the front and back of the structure. Permanent ceiling joists are now in place, the ceilings having been dropped to an eight foot level to make the heating more efficient and to make the rooms more pleasing in appearance than the high ceilings which prevailed in the old structure. Space has thereby been gained for at least two rooms upstairs in the house although these will not be finished by the committee. A bay window will be placed in the front and wing room behind front porch will be added to the house as prevailed in the old structure. The housing committee announced again during the week that its renovation demonstration was intended to show all the various improvements which could be made to an old house rather than being a pattern for the average home owner to follow in making his old house modern. "We expect that the old house will show all the phases of remodeling and we hope that the individual homeowner will repair his kitchen or living room or put a new roof on his house or alter a wing to make a modern bathroom possible," the committee said. The Seattle housing committee has erected a large sign in front of its old house—now in the center of a Seattle street—explaining that the house is to demonstrate all phases of renovation and is not a model for the average home owner.

Insull Brothers Confer at Trial

Martin Insull Samuel Insull

Standing trial in Chicago on charges of embezzlement resulting from the collapse of the Insull utilities empire, Martin Insull, left, is greeted outside the courtroom by his brother, Samuel Insull, head of the one-time gigantic enterprises. The latter, who recently was acquitted at a federal court trial on fraud charges, was expected to be a witness for his brother.

Administrator. Six school districts already have sent in donations of buttons. The Hubbard school, superintended by Eugene Silke, have sent in approximately 6000 buttons toward their goal of 10,000. The contest closes January 1. A number of the buttons being contributed may be seen at the Marion county housing committee's headquarters, southeast corner of State and High streets.

BRADLEY FINISHES LARGE TELESCOPE
B. L. "Buck" Bradley, Salem insurance man, found an easy way to attract a large crowd last night when he set up his amateur reflector type telescope near the city hall on Chemeketa street. A large number of firemen, policemen, small boys and passersby in general quickly gathered to catch a glimpse of the crater on the moon, which showed up clearly in the "scope" eyepiece until fog drifted across the sky. It took Bradley the spare time of three months to grind the mirror for his telescope and construct the swivel mounting. The mirror is five inches in diameter, three-quarters of an inch in thickness and silvered by hand. The cardboard core from a linoleum roll provided the four-foot tube he mounted above the mirror, and a microscope lens, the eyepiece. Bradley, hoping for more worlds to scan, is now grinding an eight-inch mirror for a larger telescope which he will set up on a permanent concrete base in the yard at his home in south Salem.

GRAM PENSION BILL READY FOR JUDGES

The proposed old age compulsory insurance bill, now being prepared by C. H. Gram, state labor commissioner, for consideration of the 1935 legislature, virtually has been completed and will be ready to submit to the county judges and commissioners at their annual convention in Portland next week. A number of important changes in the original draft of the bill have been proposed by Gram. One of these will provide that any person totally disabled, who has paid the monthly assessment for a period of five years, shall receive the full amount of insurance regardless of his or her age. Provision also will be made that the monthly assessments shall be collected by the state tax commission which would have authority to increase or lower the rate and the amount of insurance based on prevailing conditions. It previously was suggested that the assessments be collected by the state industrial accident commission or some similar state function. Under Gram's bill all persons over the age of 18 years, with the exception of housewives, would pay into the insurance fund a small part of their monthly earnings. This was estimated at from one to 2 1/2 per cent. At the age of 60 years persons eligible for the insurance would receive not less than $60 a month.

REAL HOLDUP MAN ALSO ACTIVE HERE

While city police were seeking to ascertain the identity of the timid, youthful holdup man who Friday night pointed a gun at Mrs. Esther Warner, 544 Highland avenue, grocery proprietor, and announced he intended to "borrow some money", Percy Drake, 1647 North Front street, reported that around midnight he had been held up by a real gunman who meant business, and relieved of $1.20. Last night police said they had not made much progress toward apprehending either of the stick-up men. Drake, on his way to work at the paper mill, was accosted at Union and Front streets by a six-foot, heavy, dark-complexioned man armed with a blue automatic pistol. Drake was searched and his purse, containing the $1.20 and two milk receipts, taken from him. The gunman then ran to a large black sedan which Drake had passed and drove away. Drake believed there were at least three men in the car. His assailant was dressed in a khaki raincoat and dark cap, Drake said.

BUILDING ACTIVITY CONTINUES TO GAIN

A gain of 81 per cent over the same week of 1933 was made by building operations here last week as indicated by the city permits taken out at the city building department. The $851 worth of permits secured last week brought the present month's total building value to $4078 and the number of permits to 25, or five more than issued during all of December, 1933. The largest permit last week went to M. L. Meyers, for the alteration of a building at 515 South Commercial street at cost of $500. To date this month's building operations have been divided as follows:

	Permits	Value
New construction	5	$1,340
Repairs	4	1,062
Alterations	10	1,376
Reroofing	6	300
Total	25	$4,078

Black Wolf Pelt Presented Here To Detroit Man

The pelt of a black wolf killed near Detroit, Oregon, was presented to the county clerk's office yesterday for bounty payment and the statutory $1.25 was quickly paid by U. G. Boyer to James B. Cox, the hunter who killed the varmint. Court officials said it was the first black wolf's pelt ever to be presented at their office. The pelt measured about eight feet from tip to tip. Many sheep have recently been killed in the West Stayton area but neither coyotes or wolves are blamed—vicious dogs being held responsible. Shepherds there have set numerous traps for the dogs and are moving their sheep to other pastures.

Records of This County Praised By Lane Auditor

Marion county has the most complete set of records and they are kept in the best form G. A. Horton, Lane county auditor, and W. B. Dillard, Lane county clerk, have yet seen, the two men reported here this weekend on a visit to the courthouse. They were on an inspection tour of a number of counties preliminary to a meeting of county clerks to be held in Portland this coming week. Marion county's freedom from warrant and bonded debt attracted both the men; Lane county has a sizeable amount of outstanding warrants and more than one million dollars outstanding road bonds. It also has a commitment of slightly more than a $500,000 yet unpaid on work done by the highway department on Lane county's account and charged as an offset to Lane county's auto tax income.
