

VIGOROUS VETO PEN ENDS TASK

Upset Price on Foreclosure Unconstitutional and Unwise, Declared

Law, would make the borrowing of money much more difficult in Oregon. Officials of federal lending agencies protested against the measure as unfair impediment to the collections of heavy loans made in Oregon the last biennium, he said.

The two bills would have allowed circuit courts to declare upset prices in foreclosure actions and to apply the full amount of such prices on the judgment when foreclosure sales were confirmed.

Refund of Vehicle License Frowned On

The governor vetoed Senate Bill 325 which provided that motor vehicle owners could receive a refund on license fees when the car licensed was destroyed before 50 per cent of the license period expired. Transfer of licenses in certain cases was also authorized. "There exists no pressing necessity for this measure; to enact it would establish an unwise and improper precedent," the governor averred.

In his veto of Senate Bill 335, Governor Martin disapproved a measure which would have made it unlawful for any individual or firm to charge for services performed in connection with laboratory tests made by an institution maintained by public funds. "The person performing such service should have a right to charge a consultant's fee," the governor declared.

Governor Martin vetoed Senate Bill 336, a measure which suspended for two more years the provisions of a statute which exempted public officials from civil liability on expenditures for relief in excess of budget appropriations. "I am opposed to any law which will encourage a public official to expend money in excess of the amounts, or for any purpose other than is authorized by law, even for so laudable a purpose as relief," the governor stated in his veto message.

Attempt to Clarify Law Held Improper

In vetoing Senate Bill 398, Governor Martin refused his approval to a measure which attempted to state the purpose of a banking act of 1913 relating to the purchase and sale of securities by banks and trust companies. "The interpretation of an existing act is the function of the court, not the legislature," the executive declared.

Two items in House Bill 528, an appropriation measure, were disallowed. One called for a $237 outlay on the John McLoughlin home at Oregon City; the second called for $3500 for the Oregon Humane society's activities in Portland. Governor Martin said the separate item of $5500 for the McLoughlin home, which he approved, was erred upon by the lobbyist seeking it as the sole amount to be asked and that the $237 item was a breach of that agreement. In disallowing the humane society's appropriation for Portland, the governor said the society received a large revenue from the sale of dog tags and did not need the money. He approved $5000 appropriated for humane work in eastern Oregon and $3500 appropriated for humane work in southern Oregon.

The governor disapproved a $8000 appropriation for the state welfare commission under the bureau of labor. The executive pointed out that this division was conducted as a self-supporting activity during the last biennium with the voluntary agreement of the bureau of labor. He said he saw no reason this practice should not be continued.

He also vetoed a $10,000 appropriation which would have extended, through the state department of education, the services of the child guidance clinic of the University of Oregon Medical school, outside of Multnomah county. "This is an educational frill which we cannot afford at this time," the governor said. "This is a time when the state can ill afford to spend money in lines of endeavor which it has not heretofore undertaken."

When Martin Signed Free Coast Bridge Bill

A group of legislators looked on as Governor Martin gave his approval to legislation which permits the state highway commission to free the five coast bridges of tolls in its discretion. Left to right: Representative Bill Miller, Representative Caulfield, Manager Ed Miller of Oregon Coast Highway association, Speaker John E. Coater, President Henry E. Corbett, Senator Goss and Senator Francisovich.

RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE ADMITTED

Hit-and-run driving charges booked against M. Pence, 1720 Broadway, after his automobile struck a parked car here early Sunday morning were withdrawn yesterday and he was permitted to plead guilty in municipal court to driving recklessly. Judge A. Warren Jones then handed him a 30-day suspended jail sentence. Pence said the accident occurred because he was blinded by lights of other machines.

J. M. Snyder, 506 Market street, arrested the same day on charge of reckless driving, yesterday by his attorney pleaded guilty. Judge Jones continued the case for sentence until Monday. No accident was involved.

The plea of E. M. Givens, 1635 South Capitol street, to a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor is due to be heard in municipal court today. Givens yesterday requested 24 hours in which to determine his plea. He was released under $500 bail. Givens' automobile, according to reports to police, Monday night struck a parked car belonging to E. A. Rosenbaum, 221 North Front, in the 600 block on South Commercial.

CITY TRUCK FACES OVERTIME CHARGE

Can the municipal judge fine the city street department for leaving one of its trucks parked overtime?
This question popped up yesterday afternoon when a street department employe handed over to Hugh Rogers, street commissioner, one of the yellow parking tickets police are distributing in large numbers this week.

"You can't get out of it, Hugh," declared Judge A. Warren Jones, laughing. "You'll have to pay $1 just like the rest."
"I won't pay it," Rogers replied.

Patrolman Albee Wintersteen recognized the city truck when he tagged it, he said, but he refused to pass it up and tag the cars on both sides of it.

Police yesterday tagged approximately 50 more cars for violating parking regulations, bringing the two-day total to around 150. In municipal court Judge Jones collected 13 $1 fines for violations.

Advance Ticket Sale About Same as 1934
Preparations for the tourney were all in order though the staff was as usual busy with last minute arrangements. The sale of tickets was reported as encouraging and of about the same volume as last year. Late purchasers kept the telephone and the office staff of Leslie Sparks busy as they hurried to obtain tickets. Sparks reported that there were still plenty of good seats to be had, however.
Players and coaches were sure of being entertained during their stay in Salem. The Y. M. C. A. opened all its facilities to tournament visitors while coaches, officials and sport writers were extended membership privileges in the Salem Golf club.
Some of the games will be broadcast by station KXL of Portland.

ANY CODE VIOLATED? Science Club Is For Those Who Insist On STUDYING OVERTIME

Here's a high school student organization that exists because the boys and girls thirst for more study and recitation than regular classes offer them. It's the Science club at Salem high school, an organization of several years' standing which shuns being known as a group existing for purely social activities.

In this club the student "assigns himself lessons, studies and recites, all on his own initiative," said Miss June Philpott, faculty adviser, yesterday in expressing the organization's ideal. To this Sam Sherrill, club president, agreed.

To meet the varied interests of the students, the club has been divided into several sections, which change from year to year according to the demand. This year it boasts sections interested in medicine, photography, astronomy, archeology and psychology.

Citrus Salad

8 large grapefruit
2 large apples
1 pomegranate or 2 cups candied cranberries
Powdered sugar
Have all fruits well chilled. Cut 4 of the grapefruit in halves and carefully scoop out the sections into a bowl, saving all the juice. Remove all membrane from shell, notch the edges with scissors and drop shells into ice water. With a sharp knife, peel and section the other grapefruit. Keep chilled. Just before serving, dry the shells with a cloth. Dice the apples. Fill shells with the cut grapefruit, apples and pomegranate seeds or candied cranberries. Arrange the long grapefruit segments upright. Sweeten the juice with powdered sugar and pour over the mixed fruits. Serve.

'Blue Bag' to Be Given in Albany, Baseball Benefit

Midway in April, members of Chemeketa Players, Inc., under the direction of Miss Beulah Graham, will journey to Albany to present "The Blue Bag," genial character comedy, at the Venetian theatre as a benefit for the Aloos, Albany's baseball club. Arrangements in Albany are under the supervision of Hal Vaughn, manager of the theatre, according to an announcement of Mike Paek, Chemeketa Players' president.
The play was given at Salem Heights last Saturday night before an appreciative audience. It again scored the success it achieved when presented in the auditorium of Salem high school under the auspices of the Salem Lions club.

GOVERNOR ORDERS THOROUGH PROBE

eral relief administration. Olson went over with the committee the manner in which relief was handled in Oregon and offered his services in getting the investigators started. Olson reported that an audit of state relief books in Portland had been concluded recently and would shortly be available to the governor and his investigators.

The chief executive dwelt at length on the necessity for keeping the investigating free of any connection with the present state relief committee. "Remember, Elmer Goudy, administrator, is to have nothing to do with this investigation," he warned.

He urged the committee not to use offices near the offices frequented by Goudy. "In order to avoid misunderstanding with the persons complaining, have nothing to do with the administrator," the governor warned. He cautioned the committee against releasing intimate details about various cases on the relief rolls.

In a formal statement read the investigators at the start of the meeting, the governor said: "The administration of public relief is a sacred trust. We must not and shall not allow anyone to traffic in human suffering. It is, of course, inevitable that in the expenditure of over $15,000,000 in the 23 months ending January 1, 1935, mistakes have been made. These should be corrected.

"The administration of its duties the committee was called upon to provide unemployment relief for a varying number of persons. The high point was reached in May, 1932, when 192,447 persons or one out of every five in the state, was receiving relief either in the form of work or directly."

POWER BILL IS KILLED IN VETO

Would Indicate Willingness Of State to Build Lines Message Declares

act in harmony with federal policies which may be made known by that time.

Under the terms of Senate Bill 404 the state board of control would administer the state utility district until three commissioners could be elected. The governor's veto message said there was grave doubt about the constitutionality of this provision inasmuch as the constitutional amendment authorizing state power districts specifically provided for an elective commission.

"It is apparent from the provisions of this bill that members of the board cannot organize until about the time of the 1937 legislative assembly," the message read. "By that time the state will have an opportunity to obtain more definite knowledge as to the plans of the federal government with reference to the building of transmission lines. The newly created state planning board will have had opportunity to complete its investigation of the Bonneville situation and to make a comprehensive report to the state on proper ways and means to be used to realize the full benefits of the Bonneville project."

Three additional objections were raised to the bill by the governor.

Too Broad Powers Accorded to Board

He said too broad powers were given the elective board authorized to administer the power act. He contended the bill as passed bore only a slight resemblance to the original Ickes bill. The latter proposed to facilitate rural electrification and the extension of service to communities now without electrical benefits. The bill passed by the senate, Martin said, was not designed for that purpose but laid its emphasis on the acquisition of transmission lines by the state and the entering into contracts for the purchase and sale of energy at wholesale.

While the utility district bill did not provide for the issuance of general obligation bonds, Governor Martin said the obligations would bear the name of the State of Oregon. "The people of the state could not afford to repudiate such bonds without seriously affecting the credit of the state," he declared.

the governor held. Moreover, the issuance of large blocks of these revenue bonds, coupled with the inherent taxing power lodged in the constitutional amendment (authorizing power districts) would tend to seriously affect the credit of the state.

Senate Bill 404 was a substitute for House Bill 423 which the state grange pushed through the rural electrification measure first proposed by PWA Administrator Ickes. The grange accepted Senate Bill 404 although it objected to the tax clauses in the latter measure. Grange leaders at the time the session adjourned, indicated they might seek by initiative a new utility measure if Senate Bill 404 was not approved by the governor.

000. In all this period only one addition to the postoffice had been provided for; a brick addition to the main, stone structure, erected five years ago.
In the postoffice here the number of men employed has increased from 20 in 1903 to nearly 70 at the present time. Local postoffice officials estimated yesterday that 30,000 city residents were being served from the postoffice here along with 4000 rural families.
