

VOCATIONAL AID TO HIGH CLASSES GIVEN

Wolf Seeks to Have Decision of Students Made Early; Kiwanians Help

More than 500 Salem high school students have taken advantage of the vocational guidance program arranged this year by the school administration with the cooperation of the Kiwanis club, Principal Fred D. Wolf estimated yesterday in summing up the plan he said had been successfully tried out. Assisted by a Kiwanis committee, Wolf has arranged for a series of speakers representing the various vocations and encouraged students to hear the talks as a means to aiding them in selecting their future vocations.

"What I wanted was to get these boys and girls to decide as soon as possible what they want to do so they might take the required studies now and not have to make them up at college," Wolf explained. "This decision as to vocation stimulates the student's interest in his school work; he gets much more out of it."

Among the vocations discussed by the various speakers have been engineering, forestry, aviation, medicine, nurses' training and banking. More than one representative has spoken for several of these professions. Others will be scheduled later this term.

Aviation, bearing more glamor than other vocations, attracted the greatest number of students, 80, Wolf said. Attendance at the 16 vocational meetings averaged more than 30 pupils.

The Kiwanis club committee consists of Dr. George H. Alden, chairman; Dr. L. O. Clement, Professor M. E. Peck, William J. Braun and Captain MacAllen of the Salvation Army.

Jess Ludington, said to be the father of five children, was arrested by the sheriff's office yesterday on a morals charge involving a young girl whose name the district attorney's office has requested to be withheld.

Ludington, hailed before Justice of the Peace Miller Hayden yesterday afternoon, took 24 hours in which to enter plea, and will return to do so at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He was committed to the county jail in lieu of $100 bail.

The girl came to Salem from another part of the state some months ago to seek work.

$13,000 Payment Sought in Suit Motor Smashup

Because J. W. Merrifield allegedly turned his car around in a Silverton street intersection without crossing past the center of the street going, as required by ordinance, he was made defendant here yesterday in a $13,000 damage action brought by Lawrence A. Solle.

Solle claimed he received permanent injuries when the motorcycle in which he was riding was hit by a car driven by Merrifield. Solle claims his face has been permanently disfigured as a result of the smash. The collision occurred December 11 of last year. He asks $12,500 general damages and $500 special damages.

JOB APPLICANT HAS LONG SERVICE, WAR

Manager D. D. Dotson of the national reemployment service agency, 355 North High street, has looked over many war and later military service records in registering men applying for jobs but yesterday he came upon the longest he has yet seen, he said. It was exhibited by Elroy D. Bates of Albany route four; he said he had not had steady employment since he quit the army in 1933.

Bates, his first honorable discharge revealed, enlisted in the army for World War service at the age of 20 at Canton, Ill., and served in four major engagements, and minor ones, as follows: Meuse-Argonne, 1 1/2 months; Amiens, with Australian corps, 39 days; Albert sector, nine days; Verdun, 19 days; Troyon, 16 days; Marchoville, November 1918 and 11, 1918. From the time the Armistice was signed until spring, 1919, when he received his first honorable discharge papers, Bates was with the army of occupation.

Despite his war service, steadily in the front lines, Bates came through the war with the tear gas was all I got," he said. This native of Liverpool, England, headed for the sea via the United States navy in 1921, served out his enlistment, reentered the army in 1926, and began a third "blitz" at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., in 1930. "I'd have had 18 years to go for a pension; that was too long," Bates said in explaining his reason for leaving the army by the honorable discharge route late in 1933. Since that time he has worked at times on farms and tried his hand at farming on his own.

This is the first year the Rational System has been taught in the Swegle district. It will probably be taught next year as it covers a period of two years. Geography of Oregon was especially stressed this year in the upper grades. In connection with this study an interesting map was made by the pupils. Each county was represented by a booklet telling the most interesting facts of that county. In the primary grades included shelter, clothing and food. Each of these divisions was represented by an attractive booklet made by each of the third grade children.

Two new pupils were added to the primary room, A Selma June Lake is the first grade, and Carol Hanson in the fourth grade. There are now 21 pupils enrolled in the primary room and 27 in the upper room.

The pupils and teacher of the upper grades are preparing for graduation exercises which will be held May 2.

Newcomers Have Good Time At Farm Meet; 2 Women in Tie; Have 11 Kiddies Each

Farm men and women who have come to Salem from the middle-west to make their new homes here enjoyed an afternoon yesterday at the chamber of commerce when farm leaders from Oregon State college discussed with them agricultural methods to be followed in the Willamette valley.

Nearly 100 newcomers attended the gathering and the majority of them were citizens who have come here within the last 12 months, according to Harry Riches, county agent, who arranged the meeting.

A survey of the families represented showed that the number of children in the families totaled 210.

Prizes were awarded by Salem merchants to four of the newcomers.

Mrs. Ira Reinhard, route three, Salem, and Mrs. Nick Renner, who lives near this city, tied for first place in the contest to see which person at the meeting had the largest family. A separate prize was given each of these women who qualified for high honors in this contest with 11 children in her family. Mrs. Reinhard came from Northfield, Minnesota; Mrs. Renner from North Dakota.

Winner Wias Price P. E. Wisner of route one, Hubbard, qualified for honors as the man who came the farthest distance to settle in Oregon. He removed from Oscola, Missouri, a few weeks ago for having farmed longer than any man attending the meeting. Barnes had been 50 years on the farm. He hails from North Dakota.

Special speakers at the meeting were Professor A. G. B. Goquet of Oregon State college who spoke on "Gardens," Don Hill, instructor at the college, spoke on "Spring Soils and Crops."

A second meeting will be held at the chamber of commerce here next Thursday beginning at 1:30 p. m. Riches announced. Topics to be discussed then by representatives of the state agricultural college will include fruit growing, dairying and poultry raising.

CITY CASE HELD UP UNTIL NEXT WEEK

Federal Judge James Alger Fee of Portland yesterday postponed until Tuesday the trial of the Salem water arbitration question interjected in the city's condemnation suit by the Oregon-Washington Water Service company. The reason, City Attorney

Chris J. Kowitz said, was because of other pressing business before the court. The delay also will enable the water company to secure as evidence a deposition from Frederick Hall Fowler, PWA arbiter who is in Washington, D. C.

This trial is on the company's plea for abatement of the condemnation suit on the grounds the city is bound by contract to permit the arbitration board to complete and file its report evaluating the company's properties here.

CHENEY TO DANCE IN CHERRIAN SHOW

Featured between the acts of the Salem Cherrian show, "Adam's Apple," in process of production by Chemeketa Players, Inc., under the direction of Clifford Wayne Hurt, will be dances by Ed Cheney, of the Cheney of the of dancing. Presentation of the play will be in the auditorium of the Salem high school, April 2 and 3, for the purpose of raising money to buy uniforms for the Cherrians.

Announcement of this feature of the program was made by William Schlitz, King Bing, and his assurance that something interesting will be seen in the intervals. Cheney is an Oregonian and attended the University of Oregon. After a wide experience on the road and with the major vaudeville circuits, he has located in Salem and has opened a dancing school in the Nelson building.

In his early experience, Cheney spent two years with the Jack Donohue and John Boyle dancing school in New York city, produced shows for Fanchon and Marco, with Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade" for a year on Broadway and on the road.

Members of the cast of "Adam's Apple" are rehearsing faithfully at the workshop at 545 Chemeketa street. Rehearsals indicate that the production will be speedy and that its reputation as a laugh-provoker will be maintained.
