Valley Development Group Meets Here; Tualatin, Molalla Jobs Aided

Representatives to Be Sent East: Governor Voices Hope for Future

Two Willamette valley flood control and drainage projects were approved yesterday afternoon by the Willamette Valley Project committee which met at the chamber of commerce, Douglas McKay, chairman, presiding.

Largest of the projects is one to control the Tualatin river, the proposal calling for an outlay of $930,000 when it is completed. John Thornburg, Forest Grove banker and member of the committee, moved for the approval of the undertaking and the committee accepted the project unanimously. Twenty thousand acres of land can be made tillable if the project is completed by the federal government, Thornburg said.

A $220,000 flood control and drainage project for the Molalla river also won the approval of the valley project group.

Both of these projects will now be reported to the state planning commission with the request that the commission immediately add its endorsement to them and send the projects on to Washington with a request for necessary federal funds. Much of the preliminary engineering work has already been done by federal engineers. The project committee determined to ask the county courts throughout the valley for a small appropriation to pay its expenses while projects are being studied for later recommendation to the group here yesterday decided it would be necessary within the next 60 days to send a competent representative to Washington to work for federal approval of the Willamette valley projects which are to be sought.

Temporary Injunction Will Remain in Force: Ruling Likely Wednesday

Courtroom is Crowded as Zorn et al Attack Board Program

A temporary injunction, restraining the state board of control from razing the walls of the old capitol, was continued yesterday by Judge L. G. Lewelling until next Wednesday. The court announced that by that time a decision could probably be made on whether the injunction should be made permanent or dismissed.

Judge Lewelling extended the injunction after listening for two hours to arguments for both sides of the case of Henry Zorn and others against the state board of control, in which Zorn and his three fellow members of the Marion County Taxpayers' league, contend the legislature, not the state board of control, must decide on razing the capitol walls or retaining them for a reconstructed statehouse. The court said briefs submitted by the litigants would be studied promptly with a view to as early a decision as possible. The exact question raised in the pending suit is new in Oregon litigation, the court observed. Courtroom Crowded

By Longview Millmen Eight to One Against Five Cent Boost in Wages

Pickets to Be Placed Monday at All of Operations

LONGVIEW, Wash., May 11 .-P)-Official announcement was made here late tonight that Longview area woodsmen and mill workers voted overwhelmingly against accepting the compromise plan offered for settlement of the Pacific Northwest lumber strike.

While the count was withheld, there was a strong rumor that the 2100 votes were 8 to 1 against the compromise plan which granted union recognition but not a closed shop, five cents an hour increase in wages and time and a half for overtime.

It was announced that picket lines will be formed around all operations at 10 o'clock in the morning, thus adding around 900 to the approximately 30,000 Oregon and Washington lumber workers previously affected.

It had been hoped that a "model agreement" for settlement of the still spreading northwest strike would be reached in the Longview area where men remained at work several days after the main strike broke.

Union demands were for 75 cents an hour instead of the present 42 1/2 to 45-cent minimum, 30 closed shop.

Further conferences will be undertaken tomorrow between union and mill representatives, it was announced. Ernest P. Marsh, federal conciliator, attended conferences where the compremise. plan was drawn.
