

Local News Briefs

Returns to Home—Mrs. M. D. Morgan of Florence, who has been here the past two weeks visiting with her daughter and her son and his family, left Thursday for Corvallis where she will visit another daughter before going on to her home. While here, she related that Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Behne of Florence, driving to Salem the day after the Capitol fire of April 25, picked up two pieces of charred documents from the stationer's room south of Salem. Strangely enough, one of the papers was a mileage claim on a trip between Florence and Rainier; and the other charred paper was relative to some state business with a woman who resides at Cushman, near Florence.

ART DEPARTMENT'S PROGRESS MARKED

Students' Work in Regular Demand; Recognition is Gained in Contests

Little is heard but much is seen of the work of one department at Salem high school—the art department, headed the past two years by Ida M. Andrews. Posters and signs made by the commercial art students are in constant demand from school officials and organizations; sketches, water colors and design pieces by the boys and girls in the graphic arts classes attract wide interest.

As Mrs. Andrews closes her service at the senior high school—where she has served in the absence of Ruth Marie Brauti, who has been studying in Europe—she finds it gratifying to compare the early and advanced work of her students, to note the progress they have made, and recall that this year one of her students won third place and two others, honorable mention, in an international poster contest.

A poster with the motif, "be humane," by Theron Kent placed third in an international contest sponsored by the Latham Foundation of Palo Alto, Calif., while posters by Machiko Usui and Doris Astill received honorable mention. In local contests Miss Usui took first in the poppy and music week poster competitions.

110 Average Enrollment
Enrollment in the art department has averaged 110 students, about equally divided between graphic and commercial arts, Mrs. Andrews says. In the former section, pupils try their hand at charcoal, pen and ink drawing and sketching, in water colors and crayon. Their final product this semester has been to produce in water colors three figures in action typifying some nationality. The outstanding work they have done probably will be exhibited at the 1935 state fair, as was done last year.

Commercial art students study all types of lettering and design that may be of use to them in business.

With the return of Miss Brauti next fall, Mrs. Andrews will return to her former position as director of art at Leslie junior high school and in the Salem grade schools.

PLAN NEW EVENTS FOR SCOUT RALLY

Cascade Area Field Day is Scheduled Saturday at Sweetland Field

Numerous innovations will be instituted at the annual Boy Scout rally for Cascade area to be held at Sweetland field Saturday afternoon and night, June 8, according to a bulletin issued by the rally committee of which M. Clifford Moyzhan of Salem is general chairman. The new ideas, credited in considerable part to Scout Executive James E. Monroe, will be in the form of additional competitive events, contests by districts as well as by troops, setting up of district records, and novelty features.

The rally will have three divisions: I, competitive events in which all troops will be urged to enter; II, free for alls by districts, and III, council time honor events.

Among the most interesting flapjack contest, division I. Each team will consist of two scouts. Judging will be based on speed, neatness and the quality of the flapjacks produced. The pancakes must be turned by flipping, without aid of knife or spatula.

Other events are as follows: Division I—Tent pitching, fire building, scout's pace, semaphore, Morse signalling, first aid, chariot race, knot tying, compass race, scout staff pace.

Division II—Undressing obstacle race, bicycle race, tug o' war, O'Grady drill, push ball.

Division III—Wall scaling, bridge building, fire by friction and bugling.

Troop four, Salem, now holds the Cascade area trophy rally cup. Other awards at the coming rally will include ribbons to event winners.

The committee working under Moyzhan includes George Naderman and Gardner Knapp, Salem; Lewis Stone, Silver Falls district; Dr. C. E. Long, Independence, and Ferris D. White, Albany.
