Gold 'Color' No Lure to Matanuskans

PALMER, Alaska, July 24. — (AP) — The Lucky Shot mine, reputedly one of the best hydraulic gold prospects in the territory, is but 12 miles away, and the streams are full of "color," but the transplanted midwesterners in the federal farm colony here show little interest in gold panning.

Few of them have gone prospecting, and there is more excitement over the arrival of four well drilling outfits and another coming to get water for their pioneer households and farms than there is in the possibility of finding gold along the stream beds.

Seventy-five more workmen, to assist in construction of homes, arrived today and 125 more are en route.

Eleven more colonists, disappointed in the colony or ill, are en route or arranging to leave for their former homes in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The baby girl, recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Boice, is thriving, and there are no new cases of scarletina, which recently broke out among children in the Matanuska valley.

CROCHETED COLLARS PATTERN 1018

Every woman today knows what a transformation a dainty crocheted collar can make in her appearance — the simplest dress takes on personality. With a choice of three such lovely collars that are so different, you'll find yourself able to change the appearance of that dress completely each time. Besides that, each collar will be a fascinating bit of needlework to you. The top one is very effective in petit boucle, string or linen floss. The other two are made of a finer cotton. In the one with frilled ruffles, the collar is one straight piece with rounded ends, the same design being repeated in the jabot. You start at the center of the strip and work round and round and then put on the fringe. The third one is the last word in lacy and can be worn opening in front or in back—as you choose. It's a very simple one to crochet.

Pattern 1018 comes to you with detailed directions for making the collars shown; illustrations of it and of all stitches used; material requirements.
