OREGON HOP SALES ONLY ONES LISTED

125 Bales Go at 71/2c Here With Market Generally Weaker, Reported

Oregon hop markets furnished the only coast sales the past week, with only 125 bales moving here, at 716 cents per pound net to the growers. Market News Service reports a weaker undertone in markets, due to a one-cent per pound decline on domestic hops in the New York market.

In Oregon, the growing crop made fairly good progress during the period the hot weather of the previous week having the effect of cleaning out the vermin from the vines. Early Clusters are expected to be picked around August 20, and the late varieties shortly after Labor day.

Washington markets were also extremely quiet with trading and movement at a standstill, no sales by growers being reported from either the Yakima valley or western Washington producing districts. The recent hot weather was at 7:30 p. m. reported as having cleaned out the aphis and crowded growth of the vines in the Yakima valley area. In the Puyallup valley, rain was reported as being needed soon to prevent deterioration in the fuggle crop in that area.

California Quiet

California hop markets remained quiet with a weak undertone during the week. In the Sacramento valley top qualities were offered at 8c-8 1/2 c, primes at 7c-7 1/2 c with occasional lots of medium or lower grades at lower prices. Current quotations are in sharp contrast with those prevailing at this nesday, 8 p. m. time last year when prices ranged from 15c to 25c depending upon quality. Two years ago prices were at the peak for recent years at around 70-70 1/2 c for top qualities.
