Men, women and even children in Ethiopia have rallied to defend their country from threat of war by Italy. Steeves Suit Friendly One Laban Avers

The Steeves trust case before the circuit court, endeavoring to break a trust instituted by the late Dr. B. L. Steeves, is not being conducted to arbitrate a family dispute, but rather is a friendly suit to determine the validity of the trust, Dr. Laban A. Steeves, a party to the suit, announced yesterday.

All members of the family were dissatisfied with the trust in its present form the doctor declared and he wished unanimously to alter its provisions, it legal to do so. It is asserted that the trust in its present form could not be dissolved for 35 or 40 years at the will of Dr. Steeves said it would leave his mother, his sister, and himself out and his children, his sister's children and Elaine W. Hunt, grand-niece of the deceased, 50 or 60 years of age.

The trust in its original draft provides that all income accruing from it should be applied on the debts of the trust and until that consideration was satisfied no one was to receive any money. So far all profits had been absorbed by the banks to meet interest and charges, he said.

The family is in entire accord with the grant made to Elaine Hunt, he asserted. The provisions were made for her because of her plans to engage in a missionary work. Miss Hunt declared in Portland that she will renounce her rights as beneficiary under the trust.

Persons representing parties to the suit yesterday took issue with Dr. Laban Steeves' statement, declaring that the widow of the late Dr. Steeves had declared she would never consent to one cent being paid Miss Hunt and that she would fight such payments in court. She was represented as asserting that Miss Hunt had used undue influence on the late Dr. Steeves to persuade him to set up a lifetime trust in her behalf.

ALBANY STEAMBOAT TRIP IS RECALLED

Kuhn, Boosting Fair, Tells of Father's Visit to Grounds Here, '74

Mayor V. E. Kuhn of Salem returned to his old home town yesterday when he accompanied the Cherrians to Albany to invite citizens of that community to attend the state fair next week. The Salem delegation appeared before a joint luncheon gathering of chamber of commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Business and Professional Women's clubs there.

Kuhn recalled that his father, then a hardware merchant at Albany, traveled to Salem by steamboat 74 years ago to attend the state fair. He declared the state fair provided the show grounds for products of the entire state and not of Salem and vicinity alone.

Livestock features of this year's fair will be outstanding, State Senator Douglas McKay told the Albany folk. He pointed out that all display and stock barn space had been taken, that more than 300 running horses would be entered in the races, many of them the finest in the northwest, and a horse show and rodeo would be presented in the stadium each night.

F. G. Deckerbach, sr., told of the early history of the state fair when the State Agricultural society was organized and efforts made to hold a state exhibit in Albany in 1860. For some reason this fair did not materialize and the first state fair was held at Gladstone in 1861. Deckerbach complimented the work of the 4-H clubs.

Those attending the Albany luncheon were William Schlitt, Mayor Kuhn, Senator McKay, Deckerbach, C. E. Wilson, W. W. Chadwick, T. A. Windishar, A. A. Gueffroy, Daryl Myers, Dr. A. D. Woodmansee and Dr. W. A. Johnson.

Seen by the Sage

By D. H. TALMADGE
 This day and date the sweat doth spurt
 From pores beyond computing,
 Ten million soda fountains squirt,
 The mercury goes scooting—

And, as is ever the case, some folks do not seem to mind it much and others suffer intensely. I hear of a case of flu in town, the victim of which has been finding it difficult to keep warm during the past three or four days. Same old story—some folks have all the luck.

Jesse McNeil, D. H. Talmadge and Daryl Lash went over into the Alsea country early in the week—speaking of luck. A day of good sport. I used to hear a good deal about the Alsea trout when I lived up in Linn county. They were said to be very temperamental, at times snapping eagerly at flies and at other times merely wiggling their tails disrespectfully.

Old Friends Located
 Thirty-six years ago I parted with Luther Thompson in Iowa. He had just returned from the Cuban Spanish war campaign. Yesterday, quite by chance, I heard from him through a mutual acquaintance as being located at Spokane. And of course I remarked that it is a small world. When such a coincidence occurs it is always proper to remark that it is a small world.

Loring Schmidt of the Grand theatre, now nearing completion in its remodeled form, has been at Portland during the week.

Neosho, Mo. H. B. knew that there was a boy in the school at Neosho, whose name was Will Rogers. The fact that Will really went to school at Neosho leaves little doubt as to the identity of the lad. In the front window of the Statesman counting room is a picture of the Dionne quintuplets. Yesterday a woman, with triplets in a perambulator, stood before the window gazing thoughtfully at the picture of the five Canadian babies. If one touch of nature makes the whole world kin, what may be expected of five touches?

Harold Busick, who has been having a sick spell, is up and around again. Danny Hendrick, age 6 years, in response to a query, unhesitatingly declares "Paris in Spring" the best of the last seven or eight pictures he has seen. Dan always falls hard for good music. And "Paris in Spring" was a delightful picture, although only a small and select party of Salem folks seem to think so.
