

Prune Crop is Aided by Rain

Boon to Walnut Growers; Sprayed Hop Yards Not Hurt Yet, Believed

The rains Friday night and Saturday will be a material boon to walnut growers and will also improve the prune and tomato crops for canning if the wet spell ends quickly, it was predicted yesterday. The showers were believed likely and most of the season's hop picking with several of the larger yards originally scheduled to have continued harvest through the middle of this week.

A few hop growers were not greatly worried but others declared that "if the sun comes out now it will drive the bugs in; if the rain keeps up mildew will grow worse and pickers scarcer." If no more rain falls, the yards that are sprayed—only a small percentage of the total—will benefit by the moisture, it was said.

Yesterday one large grower estimated two-thirds of the late hops remained unpicked. There were predictions that the change in the weather, causing crop damage, and the onset of school, cutting into picking crews, might cause 10,000 bales of hops to be left on the vines.

Helps Walnuts

Walnut growers, especially those on the heights, whose crops mature late, rejoiced at the steady rain, saying it would help fill out the meats. The long dry spell led to fears the nuts this season would not be of top quality. While a few filberts are dropping now, quantity harvesting is not anticipated for ten days longer.

Impossible picking conditions, due to mud, and crop damage by brown rot threaten if the rains continue long, prune growers said yesterday. But if the showers end soon, they will have served to improve the quality of the prunes. Early picking has shown the stems to be sticking to the prunes and the fruit to be hard, somewhat yellow inside and shriveling around the stem.

Canners said stacked tomatoes would profit by the rain although the ripener ones might crack. They are at the picking stage now.

The bean harvest for canning is near a close.

Expect Demos to Convene in North

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Men close to the democratic party leadership forecast today that the 1936 national convention will be held in some city of adequate size in the north central states.

Minneapolis, Chicago and Cleveland received prominent mention.

San Francisco, who had been mentioned as a possibility, has lost ground because of its remoteness, despite pleasant recollections of the pleasant received in 1920.

Atlantic City, another possible location, still has a chance because although a coast point it is nearer the homes of a larger number of delegates than San Francisco.

Because of confidence that the session will be brief party leaders are represented as feeling that the convention city should be at a central point.

It was emphasized, however, that the question of money is of prime importance. Party leaders are said to believe that a city should offer at least $200,000 to obtain the convention and its resultant trade for hotels and stores.

Harlem Negro to Train Ethiopians

ADDIS ABABA, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Hubert Julian, Harlem Negro, mounted on a superb Arabian mare, which he said Emperor Haile Selassie gave him, left today for Ambo, 100 miles from Addis Ababa, where he explained he would train 5,000 rookies to fight against Italy.

He was followed by streams of white-clad and barefooted retainers carrying rifles, swords, tents, beds and tinned food.

The ministry of war presented "The Black Eagle of Harlem" a shining revolver, a gilded sword and three uniforms of a "commander." He also was provided with a house, servants and interpreters at Ambo.

Some Ethiopians, however, said this was a camouflage plan to banish Julian because of his recent verbal blasts against Ethiopia's air force.

White House Goes Through Annual Cleaning

This is housecleaning time at the White House. Each year before the winter social season begins a thorough housecleaning is given the executive mansion by the White House staff under the direction of the housekeeper, Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt. One of the most difficult jobs is the cleaning of three chandeliers in the East room. Requiring careful handling and exceedingly large in size, it takes six men a day and a half to clean each one, Mrs. Nesbitt, and her husband, Henry Nesbitt, the custodian-chief clerk of the White House, were former neighbors of the Roosevelts.

McAdoo and Young Girl are Married

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, 71, drove his 28-year-old bride to "Bealls Pleasure" in Maryland today in his own small coupe for a wedding like those in Washington's time.

The small, prettily-profiled Miss Doris I. Cross, a nurse in the public health service, and the tall senator made their vows in the intimacy of a quaint living room authentically colonial.

A huge golden harp tinkled the Mendelssohn wedding march. A negro doorman admitted most distinguished guests to "Bealls Pleasure," the century-old ivy-covered colonial brick home of McAdoo's son-in-law, Brice Claggett.

McAdoo wore a blue-gray business suit. His bride was in a dark blue crepe tunic travelling dress, her dark blue off-the-face hat softened by a mere suggestion of a veil.

Strike Rioting in Georgia is Fatal

ROME, Ga., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Guns blazed in a pitched battle between pickets and a group of workers at the Rome Stove and Range company today. One worker was fatally shot and three wounded.

Two men were taken into custody on charges of violating a superior court anti-picketing order, and five were arrested later on charges of shooting at another person. All were released on bonds.

The victim of the gun battle was Fred Reid, about 30, who came here from Cleveland, Tenn., to work in the plant.

Police said picketeers resented importation of workers to fill jobs vacated by more than 50 men who were enjoined from picketing or from engaging in a group walk-out. The men quit their jobs, and some of them have been picketing.

The shooting today occurred as workers began arriving at the plant.
