"Shipmates Forever" With Keeler and Powell is Now at Elsinore

Navy sweethearts seldom become navy wives, in spite of all the romance that seems to attach to the youthful love-affairs of midshipmen at the Annapolis naval academy and the girls to whom they are devoted in their training school days."

Ruby Keeler, who co-stars with Dick Powell in the Cosmopolitan musical drama called "Shipmates Forever," now showing at the Elsinore theater as a Warner Bors. release, brought this rather disenchanting bit of information back Maryland town, where a large proportion of the picture was photographed.

"One of the many ceremonies they have at Annapolis is called the Ring Dance," Ruby explained. "When a midshipman has completed two years of study, and begins his third, he is entitled to wear his

The only gavel in history that has been used to call court to order in every English speaking city in the world has been returned to its owner, Walter C. Kelly, stage and screen star, after being. missing for over a year

The gavel, taken from a Milwaukee theater, to be kept as a souvenir, was sent to Kelly during the production of Paramount's "The Virginia Judge," now playing at the Capitol theater, in which he plays the title role. It is but one of the actor's esting history.

Kelly brings the famous judge character he created on the stage to the screen in "The Virginia Judge," a homely little comedy drama of small town life in the Tidewater country of Virginia where the townsfolk bring all their troubles to the community's kindly, genial judge. Marsha Hunt, Stepin Fetchit, Johnny Downs and Robert Cummings are in the cast.

In "Melody Trail," a musical western, starring Gene Autry, the singing cowboy, second feature at the Capitol theater, cowgirls run a ranch instead of cowboys and supply plenty of humor.
