Postal Receipts Decrease—Postal receipts at the Salem postoffice, after showing a steady increase during recent months, dropped off during October in comparison to a corresponding period last year. Postmaster H. B. Crawford announced yesterday. Receipts for October were $18,914.22 as compared to $22,504.04 during a similar period in 1934. The decrease of $3,589.82 is largely due to the fact that the state and city sent out thousands of pieces of election pamphlets during October, 1934. While a decrease was shown over last year, the office reported it was nearly $3000 ahead of October, 1933, when receipts totalled $16,177.

Many Tax Lien Cases Started

Lands Involved Are Small and Owners Abandon to Avoid Liens

Complaint for foreclosure of tax liens on 214 parcels of real property in Marion county was filed with County Clerk U. G. Boyer late yesterday afternoon by the district attorney's office for the sheriff as county tax collector.

The pieces of land involved in the complaint are all small holdings, and in most instances those on which the owners felt payment of tax delinquencies and other assessments would cost more than the property is worth. When the delinquencies were turned over to the district attorney's office early last month, about 350 pieces of land were listed, but payments since that time, running as high as 40 per day, have reduced the number materially, Deputy Tax Collector L. E. Neet said yesterday.

Owners of the land listed in the complaint may redeem it at any time until the sheriff's deed is issued by payment of the tax, though those who wait until publication of the lists starts, on next Friday, will have about $2.50 additional costs per parcel to pay to cover their share of costs, Neet said.

Second Big Batch
This is the second batch of foreclosure actions taken by the county under the new state law making it mandatory for proceedings to be instituted against real and personal property owners in arrears three installments on taxes of 1934 or prior. Final decree on the first proceedings will be taken shortly.

How is Your Garden?

Weather Man Gives Warning That Garden Work Must Be Done Soon

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
"CHRISTMAS" showing started most of us. Some of us were, almost literally speaking, caught standing with rake in hand.

But we are hoping this was just a warning of our gardening done before winter in—case it does. This week's sample has certainly shown us how impossible and unpleasant it is to work in such weather. When the weatherman's system has become purged of this unpleasant weather, we should get considerable gardening-weather yet this autumn.

Oregon commercial growers are offering bulbs and shrubs at reasonable prices now. These offers should be taken advantage of as early as possible if new things are needed for the garden. A few extra narcissus bulbs set in here and there now will make a delightful showing either as a cut flower or left in the garden come next spring.

Store Dahlias Now
If frost "got" your canas and dahlias, they may now be taken up and stored for the winter. Soil should be shaken off and the tubers put in a cool, airy place. Also they should be covered lightly with sand to keep them from becoming too dry and shriveled.

The Chinese Hibiscus, I believe, a little too tender for this climate. The Hibiscus syriacus or Rose of Sharon, does very well here. It will grow in most soils unless they are too sandy. Hibiscus even tolerates shade, although it gives the appearance of being only a "sunshine" flower. Hardwood cuttings can be made from the hibiscus at this time.

Don't Try Jasmines
Question: Can Cape-Jasmines be grown here?
Answer: No, the frost would ruin them in this section. Cape-jasmines are really Gardenias. I, too, regret immensely that they cannot be grown out of doors in the Willamette valley.

Question: Is it too early to cover perennials with leaves?
Answer: In my opinion it is. If perennials which are still growing or at least remaining stationary in growth, are covered with leaves this early, the leaves pack down and in early spring ferment, often greatly injuring if not completely killing the plants. Someone once said that winter protection in the garden should be worn more like an umbrella than an overcoat. This seems to hold true. In the east, it is customary to cover perennials soon after the first frost, or as soon as the green leaves have been frozen. Most perennials do not need protection here. I find my leaves more useful in the shrubby border. Or if you have a fern bed, you will find much use for the leaves there.

Soils for Roses
Question: What is the best soil for roses?
Answer: A rather heavy clay. Poor looking clay, if given plenty of drainage and enriched with manure, will grow the finest roses after they have become established.

Question: Is Abelia hard to transplant? I have been told that it wouldn't grow unless balled by nurserymen. My friend of mine has some she says she will divide with me. Do you think I can make it grow? Does it have some other name?
Answer: I see no reason why you can't. Abelia starts comparatively easily from slips. The Abelia likes best a light peaty soil and likes summer sun. Cuttings may be taken early this month. Abelia is often times called Bush-arbutus. I have not found it difficult to transplant.

"Different" Flowers
Question: I want something different to plant in my neighbors have a spiraea, a cotoneaster, weigela, Japanese quince, or laurustinus. Please suggest a few shrubs that aren't included in this group.
Answer: I suppose it would be of use to suggest the white weigela or the white Japanese quince? Or perhaps the white-kerria? Perhaps you would like

Inventors' Show Notable Success

Salem Well Represented; Another Here Planned Early in Spring

The Pacific Northwest Inventors' show in Portland is a wonderful exhibition, reports E. J. Reasor, Thirty cities and towns in Oregon and Washington are represented in the show by 104 inventors exhibiting 114 inventions.

"There is nearly every type of gadget on display that one could imagine, ranging from the simplest novelty to airplanes and heavy machinery. More than one-half of the floor space on the lower floor of the Grand Central Public Market which covers a full city block, is occupied by the exhibits," says Mr. Reasor.

"The show is attracting much attention. While I was there last Friday, the place was filled, and I was informed that on the opening day of the show, fully 3,000 viewed the exhibits, and good crowds are continuing each day. Large groups gather around working models while the inventors demonstrate how they operate."

Another Planned Here
"John T. Anderson, manager of the show who put on an inventors' exhibition here last winter, told me that he plans coming to Salem early next spring and stage a similar show.

In my opinion shows of this kind will do much good. They spur the inventor in his efforts to create something new and they provide him opportunity to display his creation before the public. Manufacturers seeking ideas for new factory products visit their factories, visit the show and inspect the exhibits and confer with the inventors relative to manufacturing and marketing the inventions. Often, inventions thus exhibited are taken over by manufacturers and prove a valuable contribution to the industrial world. They develop payrolls.

sions from Italy's original position.

A discordant note from Ethiopia clashed with a conciliatory keynote in closing speeches today.

An imposing list of spokesmen, including British, French, Belgian, Spanish and Argentine, had just finished stressing the league's desire to continue a search for a pathway to peace when an impatient appeal arrived from the Ethiopian delegation for funds.

"Ethiopia respectfully begs the members of the league," said the note, "to grant financial assistance to defend Ethiopia's peaceful existence against a state whose recourse to war and whose attitude is a manifest and undoubted menace to world peace."
