Candalaria in Running Again

House Bill in Its Present Form Leaves Site Issue up to Commission

heart out of it. I and my colleagues are entitled to some consideration."

Poetic Beauty Sole Reason Says Norton
"It is the sheer poetic beauty of Candalaria that draws us," Representative Norton replied, "No one can question the honesty and sincerity of Governor Martin in recommending the site. It is only a matter of a political expedient that is practical and safe to delegate to the commission the choice of the sites."

"I get tired of such maudlin sentimentality as we have just heard here," Representative Irwin said, "These narrow minded and selfish arguments have no place before this body."

Debate for the most part centered on the authorization of the commission to choose the site or the designation of the site by the legislature.

Representative Graham of Multnomah spoke for the majority report. He said that the state would eventually have to build a capitol and that when it did the people would be happy with it.

A beautiful state park around the capitol was envisioned by Representative Alber if Candalaria was selected as the site.

Majority Report Not Definite, Charged
Representative Kirkpatrick in presenting argument for the minority report of $3,500,000 on the old and adjacent site stated that the majority report decided nothing.

"The state of Oregon has no right to upset property values in the city of Salem by going to the hills," Kirkpatrick said.

Pointing to the abandonment of the three buildings located on the old site, the re-location of the highway and the landscaping of the hill site, Kirkpatrick declared that the cost would eventually run around five or six million dollars.

An attempt was made at the beginning of the afternoon session to resolve the house into a committee of the whole to consider the bill section by section. This move failed when Representative Bolvin moved that the motion to go into the whole committee be tabled.

Bull's Report Has Floor in Morning
During the morning session debate was largely on the minority report offered by Representative Bull for the expenditure of not more than $1,500,000 for a building on the old site.

Speaking for Bull's minority report Representative C. P. Haight declared that he did not want to delegate authority to the commission to decide the site nor the building to be built.

"I want to assume that responsibility myself," he said, "I want to be able to answer my people when they ask me where the capitol is going to be and admit I don't know."

The auto was driven by George C. Patterson, 42, of Scappoose, who suffered a broken arm and shock. His wife and three children received bruises and cuts about the head.

ter, said a bill was being prepared embracing grange ideas which included increasing the tax rates on personal and corporation incomes and intangibles, 25 per cent in the higher brackets; by increasing auto license fees, making them graduated, and if necessary a tax on luxuries and chain stores.

Senator Walker of the ways and means committee warned the committee of the financial load, especially if the counties shift their share to the state. He expressed the view that local folks should continue to contribute or they would not hold down the expenditures as carefully as is required. Chairman Galloway of the tax commission gave estimates of pension cost, and said if federal relief is cut off the only source for relief funds would be the liquor commission revenues, now $925,000 in the red.

Ben T. Osborne, executive secretary of the federation of labor, said he did not see how the state could meet the increased burden from available tax sources.

The Bynon bill under consideration by the committee would reduce the age requirement from 70 to 65 at once. The Hazlett bill would make the change effective in 1940.

sessions if necessary, they should not be able to finish their work. Satirical 'Oath' Observance Held WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 5.—(P)—Students of Williams college arranged a musical comedy setting today for a ceremony in which the faculty members took their oaths of allegiance to the constitution required by a new state law.

Flag-waving students thronged the campus, goose-stepping, clicking their heels and giving Nazi salutes in celebration of an official but satirical "red, white and blue day." Fraternity houses were decked in bunting.

One of three students carrying a large swastika flag was Francis B. Sayre, jr., son of the assistant secretary of state and grandson of President Wilson. He was born in the White House.

Behind them marched two youths with rifle and drum representing "the spirit of '36." Heels clicked as a campus throng saluted the Nazi flag in burlesque.

Williamstown merchants cooperated with the collegians and flags and bunting fluttered in the breeze outside Spring street shops and stores.

Great Setback For Roosevelt

Farley Disagrees; Mayor Races on Party Lines' Go Republican Too

orally campaign was decided by the voters in favor of S. Davis Wilson, republican, over John G. Kelly, democrat. Trailing by some 40,000 votes, Kelly conceded defeat.

New Deal Opposition Basis of Campaign
Throughout the campaign in New York, republican leaders, notably Malin C. Eaton, appealed for votes on a basis of repudiating the New Deal. He thought the voting showed a distinct trend away from the administration.

Farley saw his own district go republican, as did President Roosevelt, so far as the assembly elections were concerned. In Hyde park, however, a democrat is supervisor was elected for the first time in years.

Meanwhile, returns were coming in slowly from state legislative elections in New Jersey. They showed the usual democratic sweep in Hudson county, one of the party's strongholds.

Topping a long list of mayoral elections, Philadelphia produced a growing lead for the republican candidate, S. Davis Wilson, over his democratic opponent, John B. Kelly.

In Kentucky, more than a million votes were cast in a heated gubernatorial election which saw a split in the ranks of democratic leaders. The ballots were locked up until today, when counting will begin.
