It is estimated by a well known insurance company that approximately 4,500,000 accidents occur in homes every year, more than 30,000 of them resulting fatally. During 1934 when accidents of all types left a particularly bad record of 99,000 deaths, home accidents accounted for 34,000 or over a third of the total. This number was but 2,000 less than the number of lives snuffed out by autos but more than twice the total fatalities in all types of industrial accidents.
