Coal Bootlegging Baffles Operators

Intermittent and long-smoldering warfare between mine operators and miners in the anthracite fields of northeastern Pennsylvania threatens to break into open hostilities. Demands of owners that Gov. George Earle of Pennsylvania use his authority to stop the bootlegging signals a decision on the part of operators to have a showdown with the miners. It is estimated that more than 4,000,000 tons of hard coal, valued in excess of $25,000,000, are mined annually by the 15,000 or more memployed miners who eke out a living by secretly working coal lands not theirs. Numerous unsuccessful attempts have been made by operators to stop the bootlegging which began several years ago when mine owners closed down colliers and collectively worked those which had the lowest production costs. This plan threw entire sections of the coal region out of work.
