"I especially am pleased with the progress that has been made along certain development lines during my administration," Governor Martin said. Two enterprises which the governor hopes to develop during the coming year are the flax industry and Oregon's mining interests. Governor Martin lauded State Treasurer Holman and Secretary of State Snell, who also are members of the state board of control.

West Salem Well Is Down 187 Feet

The well being drilled at West Salem has reached 187 feet, says Alf M. Janssen who is doing the job. An excellent flow of water was found at less than 100 feet but it was decided to go on down through a shale stratum to a total depth of about 200 feet. Janssen handled the drilling for his brother, N. C. Janssen for the City of Salem. Several holes were drilled on this side of the river without satisfactory results. However, N. C. Janssen offers to undertake fresh drilling in the vicinity of Turner under a guarantee to supply ten million gallons of water a day or no pay. The city has not acted on the offer.

MORE MILK, BUTTER and EGGS

for Western Children

How mothers can afford more of the foods that help keep children well

... and how dairy farmers get a larger share of each dollar these mothers spend

From 1929 to 1934—as the depression shrank people's incomes—the average family was forced to get along on less fresh milk each year.

It made people see, as never before, that the old-fashioned method of marketing food was wasteful, costly.

It spelled bad times for dairy farmers. (Only in 1935 has consumption of dairy products begun to climb up again in most areas.)

In order to give their children more milk, butter and eggs, many Western mothers turned to their neighborhood Safeway grocer. His dairy product sales have been increasing every year!

For the Safeway method makes it possible to sell these vital foods at lower prices. Safeway's method eliminates wasteful, extra handling costs.

Lower retail prices help the people who trade at Safeway stores to afford enough milk, butter and eggs to keep up family health.

This increased consumption increases the farmer's income, too. Because the Safeway family pays the farmer his full market price for every quart your Safeway grocer sells.

MAYBE YOU TRADE with a grocer who runs only one store. Perhaps you incline to blame him if your food costs seem high.

But it's not his fault. It's the fault of the system under which he sells. There are too many wasteful expenses in between him and the farmer.

For just that reason your Safeway grocer belongs to a business family.

Joined with food buyers in the farm areas, skilled truckers, warehousemen, marketing experts, home economists—all helping him keep down distribution costs—he can help you LOWER the cost of living.

He can reduce the retail price of food and still pay back to farmers a larger share of your food dollar.

Your Safeway grocer is working at that job because it is what the people want done—and because the people reward men who do what the public wants.

Your Safeway grocer is working in a business family because he can perform a better service that way, and hence earn a better salary.

To producers, transporters and processors he pays 80 cents of every food dollar you spend with him. This means the farmer gets a larger share of this food dollar than was possible before the Safeway method was developed . . . M. L. Bean, Division Manager for Safeway Stores, 239 South East Salmon Street, Portland, Oregon.

How much did you spend for food last month? Check up. Then trade at your neighborhood Safeway grocer's for 30 days and compare your total savings!
