

President Seeks Help; Hitler's Boss Happy; Turf Champ Goes

SMOKE PUFFS OF DEATH—An air view of Dessye, Ethiopia, during the bombing of the town by Italian birdmen, when 32 persons were killed and the American Seventh Day Adventist hospital and a Red Cross tent were destroyed. Those smoke puffs are the bursting bombs, more than 1,000 of which were dropped by the Italians. Emperor Haile Selassie watched the raid from his palace garden.

ASKS SUPPORT — President Roosevelt vowing to loyal Democrats at the Jackson Day dinner in Washington at which, in an address broadcast by radio, he asked support of "all those, regardless of party, who believe in retaining progress and ideals." Left to right are: Postmaster General James A. Farley, the President, Gus Gennerich, the President's bodyguard, and Vice President John N. Garner.

WHAT MAKES IT TICK?—This unusual picture of J. Pierpont Morgan, international banker, was taken during the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee hearing in Washington. It was, rather, the committee who wanted to know "what makes it tick?" Mr. Morgan admitted his banking house obtained commissions of $30,000,000 for handling Allied purchases of American munitions.

TO BRITAIN—Omaha, three-year-old champion racer, being led to the gangplank of the Aquitania in New York for shipment to England, where he will appear in various British turf classics soon. The son of Gallant Fox won the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes this season.

GREEKS AWAIT RELEASE—Shortly after King George returned to the Greek throne he declared an amnesty releasing many political prisoners. Above are some of them in Oropos prison, three of whom were Venizelist insurgents. Left to right: Former Governor Chaniotis of Khio; Taredaki, nephew of Venizelos, and Lavantis, editor of "Salonica," and former communications minister.

SWIM STAR — Lenore Kight Wingard of Homestead, Pa., emerging from the water at Orlando, Fla. Mrs. Wingard, American woman's all-around swimming champion, recently broke the national 700-yard free-style record at the Orlando Olympic Stars aquatic meet. She clipped more than 13 seconds from the mark set by Alice Novack in 1932.

SCULPTURE FOR ST. JOHN'S—Mrs. Courtlandt Nicholl, chairman of the Diocesan Auxiliary of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York, watches John Angell, sculptor, at work on his tympanum, "Adoration of the Magi," which he is preparing for the south tower portal of the cathedral.

Philadelphia was awarded the Democratic convention for 1936, opening June 23, when the Quaker City submitted a bid of $200,000 at the Washington meeting of the Democratic national committee, exceeding the bid of its chief rival, Chicago, by $50,000.

HITLER'S FORMER BOSS—Meet Peter Yust, a tailor in Madison, Wis., who formerly told Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany to "snap out of it!" During the World War, when Hitler was a corporal in the Hungarian army, Yust was a sergeant major next above Hitler. Yust likes America and does not envy his former subaltern.

WARNS GAS CHIEFS — At right is Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York city as he spoke at a luncheon of the Board of Trade at which mayors of many cities were present. At left, Mayor Joseph K. Carson, Jr., of Portland, who was also a speaker.

NET STAR—Helen Jacobs, California net star, becoming acclimated to English weather in preparation for the Wimbledon tennis championships. She is shown attending the South Oxfordshire hunt near Wallingford. Although she was defeated at Wimbledon last year by Helen Wills Moody, Miss Jacobs was ranked first by the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association.

OLYMPIC ICE STADIUM—Here is the scene of the international hockey contests to be held in a few weeks when representatives of many countries will gather to participate in the Winter Olympic games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. This ice stadium has been built especially for the games. Artificial lights illuminate the rink without casting shadows on the ice.

FRENCH FRIENDLINESS FOR ITALY—Italians were not alone in their response for contributions to make the country self-sustaining in the face of imposed sanctions. Here is a throng of French veterans from the Midi—the south of France, west of Italy—placing gold offerings in the urn at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Rome, to help their erstwhile Italian comrades-in-arms.

EDITOR—Anna Louise Strong, authoress, formerly of Seattle, Wash., who has been living in Moscow for 14 years and who is an associate editor of the Moscow Daily News. Shown as she arrived in New York recently from Russia, she asserted the United States could learn much from the Soviets about social systems, politically and economically.
