A Book Review

The Untold Story of Exploration. By Lowell Thomas. Illus. by Kurt Wise. Dodd, 1935.

"The Untold Story of Exploration" is one of the most delightful and well-known for that matter, that I have read in a long time.

"I began to learn about another formerly toothacheless people when I joined the Mackenzie river Eskimos in 1908.

Whether or not you are a talented musician, you will find of interest, I feel sure, "Odd Musicians" by the author of "The Musical Quarterly" just issued by G. Schirmer, New York.

Just recently I read an interesting little note to the effect that Sinclair Lewis had to revise his novel, "It Can't Happen Here," by cable from England after the death of Huey Long.

Those of you who have read "With Lawrence in Arabia" will still perhaps prefer it, but I believe you who love adventure between your pages will miss something if you pass up this new book of Thomas's.

For the great host of readers who usually glance over the new things on diet, there is Vilhjalm Stefansson's "Adventures in Diet," the third installment of which is appearing in the January Harper's magazine.

League of Cities Will Hear Baxter

President Bruce Baxter of Willamette university will be the main speaker at the League of Oregon Cities conference luncheon here Tuesday, Mayor V. E. Kuhn, who will preside over the business sessions later in the day, announced yesterday.

The luncheon will be held at noon in the St. Paul's Episcopal church parish house.

Luncheon stunts will be in charge of City Recorder A. Warren Jones as toastmaster. The program will include music by Bill Storkow and his Hawaiian entertainmenters, the mayor said.

Representatives of state departments will attend the conference sessions beginning at 1:30 o'clock in the chamber of commerce auditorium to answer questions municipal leaders will have. Replies from six of the 24 municipalities invited here are that a dozen communities alone will send 15 representatives. Answers have come from Tillamook, West Linn, Gervais, Woodburn, Scio and West Salem.
