The new "hill holders" were ex plained here yesterday by Bonesteele Bros., Inc., local Studebaker dealer with showrooms at the corner of Liberty and Chemeketa streets. Mr. Bonesteele not only explained the "hill holders," but actually made demonstrations of the device with interesting results.

"The hill holder is new to the industry and new to motorists." said Mr. Bonesteele. "But the device answers an old problem and is avidly desired by every motorist who becomes acquainted

Awkward Moments "How many times have you wished you had three legs to use when you have stopped your car on an upgrade and desired to start up that hill again? You have the car stopped all right but your right foot is holding the brake and your left has the clutch depressed and you need another foot for stepping on the acceleraand brake. If you make a mishill, probably bumping into the car behind and the whole thing tume. results, perhaps, in a mess of ruined disposition on the part of purpose of raising funds for the everybody."

Lights Necessity

To maintain safety at present highway speeds, brakes must be feature of the Studebaker for completely dependable, according to Willis Clark, local manager astically by the motoring public, for the Western Auto Supply company whose store is at North Commercial and Court streets. "It is much safer and more economical to have a competent mechanic test your brake linings and Getchell as accompanist, Mrs. tune up your brake system, than to do it only when it occurs to you," Clark declared.

> Clark also suggested the necessity of taking the "one-eyed" auto from the highway. When the motorist sees such a car he should determine how many lights are burning on his own car, Clark suggested the motorist carry in his repair kit a bulb for each light, particularly the sheadlights and the tail lights. Lights should be checked as often as oil and gasoline are cecked, he added.
